DEWEY BOOM FOR PRESIDENT GETS FRESH IMPETUS

No Fanfare Accompanies Launching Of Support For Republican

HARRY HOPKINS RECEIVES DEMOCRATIC ATTENTION

Rated Roosevelt's Most Trusted Lieutenant And Key Man

By Kirke L. Simpson

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—The boom for Thomas E. Dewey, Michigan born New Yorker, for the Republican presidential nomination in 1940 got fresh impetus this week from an invasion of the capital by top-flight Republican state leaders from New York.

There was no open fanfare for Dewey, such as marked the dramatic launching here a year ago of Indiana's boom for Paul V. McNutt for the Democratic nomination. The Dewey boomers from New York made it an incognito affair. Nominally they just came down to talk politics with important party figures, in congress and out.

Yet Dewey, absent in person but very much present in 1940 gossip, was the theme dominating all the off-stage discussion of Republican presidential ticket availables for that year. By pure coincidence, presumably, the subject of all that talk was playing host in New York that same night to former President Hoover and Mrs. Hoover.

Even more significant of the Dewey boom aspects of the New York Republican visitation was a "get-acquainted" dinner staged under auspices of two new upstate New York Republican members of the house. It was arranged by Representatives Pierce and Hall to bring the visitors into personal contact with a hand-picked group of Washington political writers whose observations, taken together, reach a nation-wide audience.

STALIN SOFTENS TOWARD HITLER

Thinks Democracies Would Like To See Russia And Germany At War

MOSCOW, March 11.—(AP)—The possibility of a rapprochement between the Russia of Joseph Stalin and the Germany of Adolf Hitler came to the forefront tonight in discussion in diplomatic quarters as a result of Stalin's vigorous condemnation of what he called efforts to embroil the Soviet Union in war with Germany.

Such a war, Stalin told the opening session of the 18th all-union congress of the Communist party yesterday, would seem to be "without any visible basis."

His assertion that the Soviet Union did not intend to let itself be drawn into a conflict as a cat's paw to pull other nations' chestnuts out of the fire and his suggestion that Britain and France used Czechoslovakia as bait to lure Hitler in the direction of the Ukraine were interpreted in some quarters as a direct bid for friendlier relations with Germany.

His speech also was described as remarkable for its lack of invective against either Germany or Japan.

Germany, Italy and Japan, however, were charged with pulling wool over the eyes of the western democracies.

FRANTIC FATHER ASKS AID FOR TOT

PITTSBURGH, March 11.—(AP)—A frantic father today sent out a plea for "somebody somewhere, to help our boy," two-year-old Harold Holt, Jr., suffering from a malignant internal growth that physicians fear may shortly cause his death.

The father, 26, said:

"They say he has only two weeks to live. If nothing can be done—if our boy dies—then I want some hospital to examine him and try to find out what caused this growth and what could be done to help any other child who might get it."

Surgeons removed the growth last November but a few weeks later the malady appeared again and X-ray treatments were administered. A hospital staff physician explained:

"This particular growth, which is present at birth in perhaps one in every 1,000 babies, cannot be discovered until the child is about two years old.

"Then it is too late. Hundreds of similar cases have been treated, but none of the babies have recovered."

German Party Demonstration Hears Speaker Attack Prague Government

NEW CABINET FORMED TO KEEP BACK INTERVENTION

Not One Member Of Deposed Regime Of Dr. Tiso Included In Line-Up

BRATISLAVA, March 11.—(AP)—Demands for an independent Slovakia increased in volume among Slovaks tonight and a German party demonstration heard its main speaker attack the Prague central government of Czecho-Slovakia.

About 8,000 persons attended the demonstration, called originally to celebrate the first anniversary of German annexation of Austria. Before it started, several hundred men gathered about party headquarters and received rifles as police watched idly.

As it got under way several bombs were exploded in a vacant lot several blocks away. Police could not verify immediately a report that one demonstrator had been shot.

State Secretary Karmasin, spokesman of the German community in the Slovak government, told German party demonstrators that "Czech overlords" were seeking "to meddle in our affairs again."

He said that under former Premier Joseph Tiso, who was deposed yesterday by the Prague government and whose reinstatement was asked by the Slovak parliament today, "We (Germans) and Slovaks had attained a measure of freedom."

(Slovak and Czech negotiators at Prague tonight formed a new Slovak cabinet which excluded members of the Tiso government.)

FIREMEN SPONSOR ANNUAL EGG HUNT

Children Of Northeast Louisiana Invited To Easter Party On April 19

For the ninth successive year, the Monroe fire department, directed by Captain H. E. Roberts, assistant fire chief, will conduct an Easter egg hunt at Forsythe park April 9 at 2:30 p.m.

Plans contemplate making the affair bigger and better than ever, with more than 5,000 eggs, all gaily colored, being hidden in sequestered places in the park. Many of them will bear numbers that will entitle their finders to prizes.

Merchants of Monroe and West Monroe will be visited by firemen within the next few days and will be asked to contribute merchandise as prizes. In years past they have always been ready to lend their complete cooperation and this year is expected to prove no exception. In addition to the large number of prizes that merchants are expected to donate, there will be additional prizes which will be purchased with funds that will be raised by the firemen. TRUSTY PRISONER KILLED AT ANGOLA

BATON ROUGE, La., March 11.—(AP)—Warden L. A. Jones of the Louisiana state penitentiary at Angola said Ivan McGowan, 23, serving a sentence for manslaughter from Orleans parish since 1937, was killed today when a shotgun he was holding discharged accidentally.

Warden Jones said McGowan, a trusty whose home was in Oregon, was standing on the edge of a wood culvert with the butt of the gun resting on his foot. The warden said the prisoner apparently was attempting to roll a cigarette when the gunslipped and the right barrel discharged as the hammer struck the edge of the culvert.

He was killed instantly as the load struck his mouth.

MERCURY DROPS FAR BELOW ZERO

Albany, N. Y., Reports Coldest Day For Time Of Year In History

(By Associated Press)

Bitter cold sent the mercury tumbling far below zero in upper New York state and New England Saturday while heavy rains drenched the middle west and snow carried down telephone and power lines in Colorado.

More snow and rain and not much change in temperatures was forecast for Sunday.

WANAKENA, N. Y., reported 22 below zero as the cold moved in while Albany, N. Y., had 10 below, its coldest day for this time of year in history of the weather bureau there.

Northfield, Vt., reported 14 below, Boston had nine above and New York City a minimum of 18 above.

Heavy snow was reported in the east, also, ranging up to six inches in some of the New England states, but the most damage from that element was reported in eastern Colorado.

Temperatures there dropped quickly after a week of balmy thawing days, and the snowstorm disrupted traffic and caused other damage.

Overflowing creeks in northeastern Colorado gave warning that damaging floods may follow if the great snow supply atop the Rocky mountains should start melting rapidly.

The added moisture which the snow will supply was counted upon to add millions to this year's crops, however.

The cold was not confined to the east alone, Williston, N. D., reporting four above zero. Other parts of the middle west had heavy rainfall amounting to more than an inch in Missouri and Iowa.

Rain fell throughout the Ohio, Missouri and middle Mississippi valleys, and extended throughout the southern Appalachian mountains, the Carolinas and Virginia.

Some rain fell in the lower south but a tendency toward clearing and cooler was noted there.

Government storm warnings for shipping were hoisted along the New England coast.

3 HELD FOR GIVING TAGS IMPROPERLY

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—The police here today charged three men with issuing automobile brake inspection tags without first examining the brakes.

The practice was discovered during an investigation of an accident and a police drive against such practices and against drivers who had not applied for brake test tags was ordered by Superintendent of Police George Reyer.

Reyer instructed that every officer should be actively assigned to traffic duty.

OFFICERS PROBE HOLDUP ATTEMPT

Marion J. Beck Taken To Alexandria For Checkup Of Activities

Taking with them a man known as Marion J. Beck, accused of attempting to hold up and rob Mr. and Mrs. Ross Coats Friday night, Sheriff Milton Coverdale, Police Chief Frank V. Reitzell and Deputy Sheriff Frank Cline went to Alexandria Saturday for the purpose of checking up on additional angles of Beck's activities. The officers were said to believe they might be able to connect Beck with other robberies and kidnapings and also to learn whether he had any accomplices.

Police reported Friday night that Beck attempted to hold up and kidnap Mr. and Mrs. Coats when Mr. Coats left the rear door of Phoenix Drug store, of which he is manager, and got into his automobile, in which Mrs. Coats was sitting, while the car was parked in the 100 block on Catalpa street. Beck was said to have jumped into the rear of the Coats' automobile, to have pointed a pistol at Mr. Coats and to have ordered, "drive on."

Instead of complying, Mr. Coats jumped into the rear seat on top of his assailant and the latter fired one shot with a .32 caliber automatic pistol before jumping from the car and fleeing up a blind alley at the rear of the store.

Trapped in the alley, Beck was found hiding in a box and was captured by Police Officer H. O. Coates and O. S. Tomlinson, employed by Hunt and Whitaker, who had run to the scene when attracted by the shooting and excitement.

Telephone calls received from the officers indicated they would not return until late in the night and might not return until today.

Millions Expected To Sit All Night Beside Radios To Listen

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS WILL PACK GREAT PLAZA

Missions From Forty Countries Come To Represent Governments

VATICAN CITY, March 12. (Sunday).—(AP)—The coronation today of Pope Pius XII—probably the most widely awaited investiture in Catholic history—brought princes of the church, statesmen and thousands of faithful to crowded Rome in eager anticipation.

Special guards went on duty at midnight, preparing for the throng expected to gather before dawn for the spectacle. Swiss guards were routed from their beds to take their places at Vatican City gates.

Late arrivals sought frantically for admission tickets to St. Peter's basilica, and police were ordered to begin barring automobiles from St. Peter's piazza long before the doors of the basilica were to open.

Only cars bearing persons with proper credentials were passed through the lines in the early morning hours.

In parts of the world where the sun will not yet have risen, millions were expected to sit all night beside radios to hear the pontifical mass at 8:15 a.m. (2:15 a.m., eastern standard time) for the first time radio was hooked up to carry descriptions of the scene to listeners around the world.

Chill, damp weather caused some apprehension for the comfort of thousands who intend to stand outside the basilica. The weather forecast was "variable with manifestations of instability."

For the first time since strife with Italy in 1870 made the popes voluntary prisoners within the Vatican, the papal tiara with three golden crowns will be placed on the head of the new pontiff out of doors. The 1929 Lateran accord ended the popes' seclusion.

HILL SLIPPING TOWARD HIGHWAY

Gigantic Earth Slide Moving At Rate Of Foot An Hour In California

GILROY, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—A gigantic earth slide from the "Dead Hills" on the famous San Andreas earthquake fault was moving slowly but uninterruptedly toward the Pacific coast's main Canada-to-Mexico highway tonight.

On a front about a quarter of a mile long, the 125-foot high earth mass was advancing down a slope toward U. S. highway 101 at a point about five miles from here.

Engineers reported its advance at the rate of better than a foot an hour and said it was about a half a mile from the thoroughfare.

The spectacle attracted hundreds of sightseers.

"No smoking" signs were placed in the area to forestall any possibility of an explosion in the event the movement might uncover a pocket of natural gas in the earth.

The slide started Monday after heavy rains had soaked into the picturesque hill formation. It broke

HISTORIC FLAG RETURNED

FARMER UNIONS AVOID TROUBLE

Load Berries In Separate Refrigerator Cars Short Distance Apart

PONCHATOULA, La., March 11.—(AP)—Two rival farmer unions loaded strawberries today in separate refrigerated railroad cars a stone's throw apart as several thousand farmers milled about the depot.

There was an atmosphere of tenseness, but a week's rumors that the first carload movement of the 1939 Louisiana berry crop might be shipped amid violence were not borne out.

Drug stores and restaurants did a rush business in sandwiches and soda pop. City officials had closed saloons for the day.

Members of the Louisiana Farmers Protective association rallied around a sound truck to hear music and speeches made by James H. Morrison, organizer of the union and an unsuccessful candidate for congress last fall.

Morrison charged that under the existing marketing system there has been a conspiracy for years to prevent the berry growers from making profits.

Morrison cautioned against violence,

PROSECUTOR SHOT IN MISSISSIPPI

TUPELO, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—Lee county Prosecuting Attorney W. P. (Pete) Mitchell was shot tonight, Sheriff L. A. Ford said, while accompanying officers on a liquor raid near here.

Physicians at a hospital here said he had been shot through the abdomen and one shoulder and that his condition was critical.

Sheriff Ford said Sam Garrett was taken to the county jail here for questioning in connection with the shooting, but was unable to give a coherent statement.

The sheriff said he, Mitchell and Deputies O. T. Trapp and George Clements made a raid tonight on Garrett's establishment, and that Mitchell and Garrett were alone in the place at the time of the shooting. Four shots were fired, two of which apparently went wild, the sheriff said.

Prosecuting Attorney Mitchell has been active recently against Lee county liquor dealers and has accompanied officers on several raids. He was given a blood transfusion tonight at the hospital.

ROOSEVELT STILL WIELDING POWER

Many Of Measures Passed By Congress But He Gets Some Rebuffs

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Two months and more of congress and the continuing battle between President Roosevelt and members of his own party have demonstrated that the chief executive, despite the setback of last fall's elections, is still a power in battle.

His defense program is sliding through with scarcely a hitch, although accompanied by vigorous criticism of his foreign policy. A bill giving him power to reorganize the executive branch of the government has been passed by the house. His major nominations, some of them disputed, have received confirmation by heavy senate majorities.

On the other side of the scale, the chief executive was soundly rebuffed by the senate for not consulting Senators Glass and Byrd of Virginia on the appointment of a federal judge in that state. Economy advocates won the first round of a still unfinished bout over the amount to be appropriated for relief. And the nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to the interstate commerce commission is facing opposition of such proportions that there is talk it may be withdrawn.

At the moment, Mr. Roosevelt is simultaneously endeavoring to encourage the expansion of business by statements that he has no further plans for business legislation at this session and preparing to renew his

Other members of the board are James P. O'Connor, assistant attorney general and the trial judges.

Mr. Sauer said many of the applicants had sought clemency at a previous session of the board. Fifty-five of those applying were sentenced for murder, 39 for manslaughter, 14 for assault to murder and 2 for involuntary homicide.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN SITUATION GIVES CHANCE TO GRAB

FIVE LIKELY OBJECTIVES CONSIDERED FOR MONTHS

Fuehrer Reported To Be In Mood For Rapproachment With France

By Louis P. Lochner

BERLIN, March 11.—(AP)—Germany has set her face determinedly eastward again after a brief period of seeming indecision.

This is the conclusion this correspondent has reached after two days of careful questioning of many responsible men in Germany.

Replies of these men indicate that domination of the Balkans is the present objective of the Nazi government's foreign policy.

Events in Czechoslovakia (where Slovak separatist agitation has led to dismissal of three ministers, including the premier, of the autonomous Slovak government by the president of the republic) appear to have hastened the German decision.

For months the Germany of Adolf Hitler has had five likely objectives under study: first, recovery of her war-lost colonies; second, penetration of southeastern Europe; third, reunion of Memel and Danzig, taken away by the treaty of Versailles, with the Reich; fourth, help to Italy in her Mediterranean aspirations; fifth, an understanding with France.

None could tell when German power politics would be turned to realization of any of these objectives. That is Hitler's way. He likes to let events ripen and then seize an opportunity with lightning rapidity before others have made up their minds.

President Emil Hacha of the Czechoslovak central government, by cracking down on the leaders of the autonomous Slovak regime, gave Hitler one of these chances.

A little over a year ago Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria gave him a sudden opportunity by a sudden call for an Austrian plebiscite after he had received every different orders in a talk with Hitler.

The result was anschluss of Austria and Germany—the first anniversary of which greater Germany celebrates Monday, with Hitler attending ceremonies in Vienna. Schuschnigg was taken into custody, and still is detained.

Now the Czechs apparently have put themselves in a position where they eventually either will have to rescind the action of President Hacha and grant the Slovaks whatever they demand or risk being snuffed out as an independent state by their great German neighbor.

Germans took a strong view of the current Czechoslovak situation, although a government spokesman said today that Hitler probably would simply observe events for a while before committing himself.

German authorities apparently wanted the Vienna anniversary ceremonies to pass off smoothly Monday before the Reich takes any definite action in Czechoslovakia. The government had not replied to a note from Dr. Joseph Tiso, the ousted Slovak premier, protesting against his removal.

Whatever happens in Czechoslovakia, Germany probably will gain her hold on the Czechs, Slovaks and Carpatho-Ukrainians (Ruthenians) as well will be tighter. She virtually will be master as far southeast as the Rumanian frontier.

From a military viewpoint, domination of Czechoslovakia would mean that Germany in case of need could enter Poland across a virtually unfortified frontier. This may never happen, but such a frontier situation perhaps will make the Poles more amen-

3 HELD FOR GIVING TAGS IMPROPERLY

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—The police here today charged three men with issuing automobile brake inspection tags without first examining the brakes.

The practice was discovered during an investigation of an accident and a police drive against such practices and against drivers who had not applied for brake test tags was ordered by Superintendent of Police George Reyer.

Reyer instructed that every officer should be actively assigned to traffic duty.

OFFICERS PROBE HOLDUP ATTEMPT

Marion J. Beck Taken To Alexandria For Checkup Of Activities

Taking with them a man known as Marion J. Beck, accused of attempting to hold up and rob Mr. and Mrs. Ross Coats Friday night, Sheriff Milton Coverdale, Police Chief Frank V. Reitzell and Deputy Sheriff Frank Cline went to Alexandria Saturday for the purpose of checking up on additional angles of Beck's activities. The officers were said to believe they might be able to connect Beck with other robberies and kidnapings and also to learn whether he had any accomplices.

Police reported Friday night that Beck attempted to hold up and kidnap Mr. and Mrs. Coats when Mr. Coats left the rear door of Phoenix Drug store, of which he is manager, and got into his automobile, in which Mrs. Coats was sitting, while the car was parked in the 100 block on Catalpa street. Beck was said to have jumped into the rear of the Coats' automobile, to have pointed a pistol at Mr. Coats and to have ordered, "drive on."

Instead of complying, Mr. Coats jumped into the rear seat on top of his assailant and the latter fired one shot with a .32 caliber automatic pistol before jumping from the car and fleeing up a blind alley at the rear of the store.

Trapped in the alley, Beck was found hiding in a box and was captured by Police Officer H. O. Coates and O. S. Tomlinson, employed by Hunt and Whitaker, who had run to the scene when attracted by the shooting and excitement.

Telephone calls received from the officers indicated they would not return until late in the night and might not return until today.

Millions Expected To Sit All Night Beside Radios To Listen

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS WILL PACK GREAT PLAZA

Missions From Forty Countries Come To Represent Governments

VATICAN CITY, March 12. (Sunday).—(AP)—The coronation today of Pope Pius XII—probably the most widely awaited investiture in Catholic history—brought princes of the church, statesmen and thousands of faithful to crowded Rome in eager anticipation.

Special guards went on duty at midnight, preparing for the throng expected to gather before dawn for the spectacle. Swiss guards were routed from their beds to take their places at Vatican City gates.

Late arrivals sought frantically for admission tickets to St. Peter's basilica, and police were ordered to begin barring automobiles from St. Peter's piazza long before the doors of the basilica were to open.

Only cars bearing persons with proper credentials were passed through the lines in the early morning hours.

In parts of the world where the sun will not yet have risen, millions were expected to sit all night beside radios to hear the pontifical mass at 8.15 a.m. (2.15 a.m., eastern standard time) for the first time radio was hooked up to carry descriptions of the scene to listeners around the world.

Chill, damp weather caused some apprehension for the comfort of thousands who intend to stand outside the basilica. The weather forecast was "variable with manifestations of instability."

For the first time since strife with Italy in 1870 made the popes voluntary prisoners within the Vatican, the papal tiara with three golden crowns will be placed on the head of the new pontiff out of doors. The 1929 Lateran accord ended the popes' seclusion.

Hundreds of thousands will throng the great plaza below St. Peter's to

HILL SLIPPING TOWARD HIGHWAY

Gigantic Earth Slide Moving At Rate Of Foot An Hour In California

GILROY, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—A gigantic earth slide from the "Dead Hills" on the famous San Andreas earthquake fault was moving slowly but uninterruptedly toward the Pacific coast's main Canada-to-Mexico highway tonight.

On a front about a quarter of a mile long, the 125-foot high earth mass was advancing down a slope toward U. S. highway 101 at a point about five miles from here.

Engineers reported its advance at the rate of better than a foot an hour and said it was about a half a mile from the thoroughfare.

The spectacle attracted hundreds of sightseers.

"No smoking" signs were placed in the area to forestall any possibility of an explosion in the event the movement might uncover a pocket of natural gas in the earth.

The slide started Monday after heavy rains had soaked into the picturesque hill formation. It broke

HISTORIC FLAG RETURNED

FARMER UNIONS AVOID TROUBLE

Load Berries In Separate Refrigerator Cars Short Distance Apart

PONCHATOULA, La., March 11.—(AP)—Two rival farmer unions loaded strawberries today in separate refrigerated railroad cars a stone's throw apart as several thousand farmers milled about the depot.

There was an atmosphere of tenseness, but a week's rumors that the first carload movement of the 1939 Louisiana berry crop might be shipped amid violence were not borne out.

Drug stores and restaurants did a rush business in sandwiches and soda pop. City officials had closed saloons for the day.

Members of the Louisiana Farmers Protective association rallied around a sound truck to hear music and speeches made by James H. Morrison, organizer of the union and an unsuccessful candidate for congress last fall.

Morrison charged that under the existing marketing system there has been a conspiracy for years to prevent the berry growers from making profits.

PROSECUTOR SHOT IN MISSISSIPPI

TUPELO, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—Lee county Prosecuting Attorney W. P. (Pete) Mitchell was shot tonight, Sheriff L. A. Ford said, while accompanying officers on a liquor raid near here.

Physicians at a hospital here said he had been shot through the abdomen and one shoulder and that his condition was critical.

Sheriff Ford said Sam Garrett was taken to the county jail here for questioning in connection with the shooting, but was unable to give a coherent statement.

The sheriff said he, Mitchell and Deputies O. T. Trapp and George Clements made a raid tonight on Garrett's establishment, and that Mitchell and Garrett were alone in the place at the time of the shooting. Four shots were fired, two of which apparently went wild, the sheriff said.

Prosecuting Attorney Mitchell has been active recently against Lee county liquor dealers and has accompanied officers on several raids. He was given a blood transfusion tonight at the hospital.

ROOSEVELT STILL WIELDING POWER

Many Of Measures Passed By Congress But He Gets Some Rebuffs

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—Two months and more of congress and the continuing battle between President Roosevelt and members of his own party have demonstrated that the chief executive, despite the setback of last fall's elections, is still a power in battle.

His defense program is sliding through with scarcely a hitch, although accompanied by vigorous criticism of his foreign policy. A bill giving him power to reorganize the executive branch of the government has been passed by the house. His major nominations, some of them disputed, have received confirmation by heavy senate majorities.

On the other side of the scale, the chief executive was soundly rebuffed by the senate for not consulting Senators Glass and Byrd of Virginia on the appointment of a federal judge in that state. Economy advocates won the first round of a still unfinished bout over the amount to be appropriated for relief. And the nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to the interstate commerce commission is facing opposition of such proportions that there is talk it may be withdrawn.

At the moment, Mr. Roosevelt is simultaneously endeavoring to encourage the expansion of business by statements that he has no further plans for business legislation at this session and preparing to renew his

By Louis P. Lochner

BERLIN, March 11.—(AP)—Germany has set her face determinedly eastward again after a brief period of seeming indecision.

This is the conclusion this correspondent has reached after two days of careful questioning of many responsible men in Germany.

Replies of these men indicate that domination of the Balkans is the present objective of the Nazi government's foreign policy.

Events in Czechoslovakia (where Slovak separatist agitation has led to dismissal of three ministers, including the premier, of the autonomous Slovak government by the president of the republic) appear to have hastened the German decision.

For months the Germany of Adolf Hitler has had five likely objectives under study: first, recovery of her war-lost colonies; second, penetration of southeastern Europe; third, reunion of Memel and Danzig, taken away by the treaty of Versailles, with the Reich; fourth, help to Italy in her Mediterranean aspirations; fifth, an understanding with France.

None could tell when German power politics would be turned to realization of any of these objectives. That is Hitler's way. He likes to let events ripen and then seize an opportunity with lightning rapidity before others have made up their minds.

President Emil Hacha of the Czechoslovak central government, by cracking down on the leaders of the autonomous Slovak regime, gave Hitler one of these chances.

A little over a year ago Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria gave him a sudden opportunity by a sudden call for an Austrian plebiscite after he had received every different orders in a talk with Hitler.

The result was anschluss of Austria and Germany—the first anniversary of which greater Germany celebrates Monday, with Hitler attending ceremonies in Vienna. Schuschnigg was taken into custody, and still is detained.

Now the Czechs apparently have put themselves in a position where they eventually either will have to rescind the action of President Hacha and grant the Slovaks whatever they demand or risk being snuffed out as an independent state by their great German neighbor.

Germans took a strong view of the current Czechoslovak situation, although a government spokesman said today that Hitler probably would simply observe events for a while before committing himself.

German authorities apparently wanted the Vienna anniversary ceremonies to pass off smoothly Monday before the Reich takes any definite action in Czechoslovakia. The government had not replied to a note from Dr. Joseph Tiso, the ousted Slovak premier, protesting against his removal.

Whatever happens in Czechoslovakia, Germany probably will gain her hold on the Czechs, Slovaks and Carpatho-Ukrainians (Ruthenians) as well will be tighter. She virtually will be master as far southeast as the Rumanian frontier.

From a military viewpoint, domination of Czechoslovakia would mean that Germany in case of need could enter Poland across a virtually unfortified frontier. This may never happen, but such a frontier situation perhaps will make the Poles more amen-

...Greatly Improved For Those Having Stomach Operations

...WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—...provement has been evolved ... the patient a better than ... recovery chance instead of the ... when certain dangerous complications develop in stomach operations.

Dr. Carl L. Hoag, San Francisco surgeon, and Dr. John B. Saunders, University of California anatomist, developed the process. It was explained to the profession in the current issue of Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, a medical publication.

It is a supplemental operation, performed not less than seven days after the initial surgery, in which the doctor improves upon his first work if by that time improvement is considered necessary.

In initial stomach operations, which usually are for ulcer or cancer, the surgeon cuts away the diseased part. Frequently this involves removal of tissue at or near the stomach's outlet.

To rebuild the digestive organ and provide it with a healthy new outlet the surgeon doubles a length of the ... the cut in the intestine thus serves as the new stomach outlet.

The surgeon cannot tell whether this new outlet will work until the stomach and intestines start again their normal function of rolling and contracting to keep food moving. The digestive system will not so function while the patient is under anaesthetics.

Nausea in the patient gives the surgeon his cue for the Hoag-Saunders operation, which is called a jejunoplasty.

In the second operation the surgeon cuts away a portion of the doubled intestine end so that the part attached to the stomach resembles somewhat the top portion of a tiny pair of trousers—a doubled tube with an extra large opening in the area of the bend.

This insures the patient against further stricture. If no other complications develop, recovery is in order.

Formerly surgeons who repeated operations were unable to detect strictures, Dr. Hoag said, because relaxation under anaesthesia permitted the artificial outlet to open again and mislead the doctor.

Dr. Hoag said he performed the first jejunoplasty eight years ago as "a last resort." The patient recovered.

New Plan To Encourage Farm Ownership Offered

Jones Proposes To Have Government Insure Loans By Private Concerns

By Tremain F. Robinson

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—A new plan to encourage tenants and sharecroppers to own farms of their own and drastically curtail tenancy through federal insurance of mortgages has been proposed in congress by Representative Marvin Jones, chairman of the house agriculture committee.

Today, he said its possibilities are practically unlimited and that it may go a long way toward eliminating the existing disheartening conditions among tenants, particularly in the south. While the plan would be open to farmers of all sections, its principal effect would be in the south.

In the form of an amendment to the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act, this new plan provides much the same thing as FHA for farmers. Those who wish to buy small farms or refinance their existing mortgages would be able to do so at a low interest rate and easy payments over a long period of years through the form of government insurance.

The agriculture committee has not given formal study to the plan yet, but Jones and other members have discussed it informally with the agriculture department and have found opinion favorable to it. The budget bureau has not passed on it yet, so department officials could not give formal support to the plan. However, Jones expects little opposition to it, as it will probably cost no more than, if as much as, the present farm tenant act now does but would have a much greater spread.

Under this new Jones plan, the government would not lend money to farmer-purchasers. Instead, it would insure loans made on farms by banks, insurance companies and other investors.

For farmers this would mean: low interest rates, easier payments, less danger of foreclosures, more considerate treatment and a chance to catch up when there is a foreclosure.

For investors it would mean: a long term investment, lower interest but certain payment. Income would be smaller but there would be no risk involved because the government would pay off if the farmer could not.

Operating through the department of agriculture, the government would insure mortgages which are not in excess of the "reasonable value" of a farm involved. The reasonable value, ability of a farmer to pay off and other such factors would be passed on by county committees, which have been set up to handle the direct loans now being made to tenants. County committees would have to approve all mortgages insured.

Before being insured, the mortgages would have to have "satisfactory" maturity and could run as long as 40 years. Also, they would be paid off on the amortization plan with payments "not in excess of his reasonable ability to pay." Interest rates could not be more than 3 per cent on the unpaid balance.

Also similar to FHA, the payments would cover insurance, repairs, taxes, delinquency charges and other charges which most farm and home owners run into. The plan thus would enable buyers of farms to plan their payments and know how they stand because the one regular payment would cover everything.

When a down payment of at least 10 per cent is not made by a farmer, the plan protects the government by authorizing a lien on crops to assure payment of 10 per cent of the principal.

Jones said he would much prefer to have the government insure a loan to a farmer who has good equipment rather than to one who can make a 10 per cent down payment but who does not have the equipment.

"The man who has the equipment is really out to make a go of it," Jones said.

Under his plan, no premium charges would be made for insurance of the mortgages.

When a borrower is in default for more than 60 days, the mortgagee will be entitled to collect the full amount owing to him from the government, if the mortgage is insured under the Jones plan. To collect, he would have to turn over all claims to the government. The government would pay off in fully guaranteed debentures instead of cash.

When the government takes over the mortgage, the secretary of agriculture may foreclose. However, foreclosure proceedings "shall not be instituted" if the farmer turns over title to the mortgage property. If the farmer wants to keep the property, has made "reasonable efforts" to meet the payments as they came along and it appears that he will be able to catch up again within 5 years after the maturity date, the secretary is directed to work out a plan of payment "within the probable future means" of the farmer. This appears to be ample protection for bad years and gives farmers a chance to get through those years with most of his hide—a chance most do not have now.

If worst comes to worst and a farm must be foreclosed, the government will sell it again. If it brings more than the farmer owes, the difference will go to the farmer.

County committees, which have the job of passing on farms for which mortgages will be insured will have three additional duties under this plan; receive listings of farms for sale, receive applications from tenants wanting to buy farms or re-finance existing loans and appraise farms which tenants want to buy.

While this insurance plan appears to be almost limitless—at least as long as there is a tenant problem—Jones has put in a tentative limit of one billion dollars as the top amount of mortgages which can be insured. This total would be reached by a staggered program of so much each year.

Jones said it will work out in the same way the present farm tenant law now operates, as far as the borrower is concerned. However, that is limited to $25,000,000 a year in direct government loans to tenants for buying farms. This new plan would not have that limit so consequently could help out thousands more tenants every year.

Her eight-year-old daughter entered fire headquarters and told the captain "my mother sent this to you," and handed him this note:

METHODIST MINISTER WILL LEAVE CHURCH

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., March 11.—(AP)—A Methodist minister, in letters to other clergymen at the Kansas Methodist conference, declared today his intention of leaving the faith because he was expected to be unfaithful to his ordination vows.

The letter was signed by the Rev. W. H. Werner of Topeka, Kas., who said he had been a minister for 18 years.

It asserted that "it is common practice today, in the Methodist church, either to deny outright the most essential doctrines of the Bible or to hush them up so that they drop into oblivion."

As examples the protesting minister cited the virgin birth, resurrection of the body and the second coming of the Lord.

"Instead of preaching regeneration, I am admonished to teach the devil's doctrine that all men are brothers," the letter said.

"I would be happier with another denomination or group. . . . May God help the Methodist church."

MILAN, March 11.—(AP)—A usually reliable source said tonight that five men were killed when a German military plane bound from Tripoli, in Italian Libya, to Berlin, Germany, crashed near Ferrara, in northern Italy. The plane was said to have been carrying six German officers and one civilian. Two officers were said to have landed safely by jumping with parachutes before the crash, which was blamed on ice on the plane's wings.

What Would an X-RAY of Your House Reveal?

Behind your walls, under your floors, costly damage may be going on—without you knowing it. An astonishing percentage of structures in this section is being attacked by termites. These tiny wood-eating insects enter a building from the ground, and remain hidden inside the wood while they carry on their destructive work. They leave no outward evidence of the damage they are doing, and property owners seldom suspect the presence of termites until costly repairs become necessary.

Why not find out if your property is termite-infested? Phone us and a trained Terminix Representative will inspect it—without cost or obligation. This is a free service offered by Terminix—the world's largest termite control organization.

NEW PROCESS IS AID TO SURGERY

Chances Greatly Improved For Those Having Stomach Operations

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—(AP)—A surgical process has been evolved which gives the patient a better than 3-to-1 recovery chance instead of the old 1-to-3 odds when certain dangerous complications develop in stomach operations.

Dr. Carl L. Hoag, San Francisco surgeon, and Dr. John B. Saunders, University of California anatomist, developed the process. It was explained to the prtfession in the current issue of Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, a medical publication.

It is a supplemental operation, performed not less than seven days after the initial surgery, in which the doctor improves upon his first work if by that time improvement is considered necessary.

In initial stomach operations, which usually are for ulcer or cancer, the surgeon cuts away the diseased part. Frequently this involves removal of tissue at or near the stomach's outlet.

To rebuild the digestive organ and provide it with a healthy new outlet the surgeon doubles a length of the small intestine. He attaches this end to the stomach, either by joining it to the place where diseased tissue was removed or by making a new cut in the bottom of the food-receiving organ and inserting the doubled end like a stopper.

The cut in the intestine then serves as the new stomach outlet.

The surgeon cannot tell whether this new outlet will work until the stomach and intestines start again their normal function of rolling and contracting to keep food moving. The digestive system will not so function while the patient is under anaesthetics.

Nausea in the patient gives the surgeon his cue for the Hoag-Saunders operation, which is called a jejunoplasty.

In the second operation the surgeon cuts away a portion of the doubled intestine end so that the part attached to the stomach resembles somewhat the top portion of a tiny pair of trousers—a doubled tube with an extra large opening in the area of the bend.

This insures the patient against further stricture. If no other complications develop, recovery is in order.

Formerly surgeons who repeated operations were unable to detect strictures, Dr. Hoag said, because relaxation under anaesthesia permitted the artificial outlet to open again and mislead the doctor.

Dr. Hoag said he performed the first jejunoplasty eight years ago as "a last resort." The patient recovered.

New Plan To Encourage Farm Ownership Offered

By Tremain F. Robinson

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—A new plan to encourage tenants and sharecroppers to own farms of their own and drastically curtail tenancy through federal insurance of mortgages has been proposed in congress by Representative Marvin Jones, chairman of the house agriculture committee.

Today, he said its possibilities are practically unlimited and that it may go a long way toward eliminating the existing disheartening conditions among tenants, particularly in the south. While the plan would be open to farmers of all sections, its principal effect would be in the south.

In the form of an amendment to the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act, this new plan provides much the same thing as FHA for farmers. Those who wish to buy small farms or refinance their existing mortgages would be able to do so at a low interest rate and easy payments over a long period of years through the form of government insurance.

The agriculture committee has not given formal study to the plan yet, but Jones and other members have discussed it informally with the agriculture department and have found opinion favorable to it. The budget bureau has not passed on it yet, so department officials could not give formal support to the plan. However, Jones expects little opposition to it, as it will probably cost no more than, if as much as, the present farm tenant act now does but would have a much greater spread.

Under this new Jones plan, the government would not lend money to farmer-purchasers. Instead, it would insure loans made on farms by banks, insurance companies and other investors.

For farmers this would mean: low interest rates, easier payments, less danger of foreclosures, more considerate treatment and a chance to catch up when there is a foreclosure.

For investors it would mean: a long term investment, lower interest but certain payment. Income would be smaller but there would be no risk involved because the government would pay off if the farmer could not.

Operating through the department of agriculture, the government would insure mortgages which are not in excess of the "reasonable value" of a farm involved. The reasonable value, ability of a farmer to pay off and other such factors would be passed on by county committees, which have been set up to handle the direct loans now being made to tenants. County committees would have to approve all mortgages insured.

Before being insured, the mortgages would have to have "satisfactory" maturity and could run as long as 40 years. Also, they would be paid off on the amortization plan with payments "not in excess of his reasonable ability to pay." Interest rates could not be more than 3 per cent on the unpaid balance.

Also similar to FHA, the payments would cover insurance, repairs, taxes, delinquency charges and other charges which most farm and home owners run into. The plan thus would enable buyers of farms to plan their payments and know how they stand because the one regular payment would cover everything.

When a down payment of at least 10 per cent is not made by a farmer, the plan protects the government by authorizing a lien on crops to assure payment of 10 per cent of the principal.

Jones said he would much prefer to have the government insure a loan to a farmer who has good equipment rather than to one who can make a 10 per cent down payment but who does not have the equipment.

"The man who has the equipment is really out to make a go of it," Jones said.

Under his plan, no premium charges would be made for insurance of the mortgages.

When a borrower is in default for more than 60 days, the mortgagee will be entitled to collect the full amount owing to him from the government, if the mortgage is insured under the Jones plan. To collect, he would have to turn over all claims to the government. The government would pay off in fully guaranteed debentures instead of cash.

When the government takes over the mortgage, the secretary of agriculture may foreclose. However, foreclosure proceedings "shall not be instituted" if the farmer turns over title to the mortgage property. If the farmer wants to keep the property, has made "reasonable efforts" to meet the payments as they came along and it appears that he will be able to catch up again within 5 years after the maturity date, the secretary is directed to work out a plan of payment "within the probable future means" of the farmer. This appears to be ample protection for bad years and gives farmers a chance to get through those years with most of his hide—a chance most do not have now.

If worst comes to worst and a farm must be foreclosed, the government will sell it again. If it brings more than the farmer owes, the difference will go to the farmer.

County committees, which have the job of passing on farms for which mortgages will be insured will have three additional duties under this plan; receive listings of farms for sale, receive applications from tenants wanting to buy farms or re-finance existing loans and appraise farms which tenants want to buy.

While this insurance plan appears to be almost limitless—at least as long as there is a tenant problem—Jones has put in a tentative limit of one billion dollars as the top amount of mortgages which can be insured. This total would be reached by a staggered program of so much each year.

Jones said it will work out in the same way the present farm tenant law now operates, as far as the borrower is concerned. However, that is limited to $25,000,000 a year in direct government loans to tenants for buying farms. This new plan would not have that limit so consequently could help out thousands more tenants every year.

Her eight-year-old daughter entered fire headquarters and told the captain "my mother sent this to you," and handed him this note:

"The legs on the back of my stove in kitchen fell off and the stove has tipped over. The place is filled up with smoke and gas and I have an infant and am afraid there might be a fire. My canary has dropped in its cage. Would you please come up and put out the fire in the stove for me."

METHODIST MINISTER WILL LEAVE CHURCH

INDEPENDENCE, Kas., March 11.—(AP)—A Methodist minister, in letters to other clergymen at the Kansas Methodist conference, declared today his intention of leaving the faith because he was expected to be unfaithful to his ordination vows.

The letter was signed by the Rev. W. H. Werner of Topeka, Kas., who said he had been a minister for 18 years.

It asserted that "it is common practice today, in the Methodist church, either to deny outright the most essential doctrines of the Bible or to hush them up so that they drop into oblivion."

As examples the protesting minister cited the virgin birth, resurrection of the body and the second coming of the Lord.

"Instead of preaching regeneration, I am admonished to teach the devil's doctrine that all men are brothers," the letter said.

"I would be happier with another denomination or group. . . . May God help the Methodist church."

Behind your walls, under your floors, costly damage may be going on—without you knowing it. An astonishing percentage of structures in this section is being attacked by termites. These tiny wood-eating insects enter a building from the ground, and remain hidden inside the wood while they carry on their destructive work. They leave no outward evidence of the damage they are doing, and properly owners seldom suspect the presence of termites until costly repairs become necessary.

Why not find out if your property is termite-infested? Phone us and a trained Terminix Representative will inspect it—without cost or obligation. This is a free service offered by Terminix—the world's largest termite control organization.

INSURANCE MEN HOLD BANQUET

Group From Two States Assembles At Hotel Frances Saturday

Life insurance men of north Louisiana attended a group meeting at Hotel Frances Saturday noon when the guest speaker was J. Lee Denson, state president of the Mississippi association.

A. N. Robinson, president of the northeast Louisiana association, was toastmaster. He introduced the guests who included besides Mr. Denson, Louie E. Throgmorton, president of the Louisiana State association; M. O. Carter, president of the Shreveport association; and Grady Nelson, Shreveport.

Mr. Denson spoke on the theme, "Daily Bread." He said in part:

"Men have two natural enemies, death and incapacity. Either may cheat him of years required for his family. The common adversities of year after year rob him of accumulated surplus and in 95 cases out of every 100 men come to the age of 65 either dead or in poverty.

"Through some medium of consistent thrift man must provide for these inescapable emergencies. Easily and quickly gotten gains slip easily and quickly away. The consistent savings squeezed out of the smaller income becomes the sweeter, the most sacred, and the most carefully preserved. To this end, sixty-five million American citizens have banded themselves together in the greatest enterprise of all time and have pooled their assets of nearly thirty billion dollars, which together with future pledges will build an ultimate hope chest for American citizens of the staggering sum of one hundred and ten billion dollars. That enterprise is Life Insurance."

Mr. Denson quoted from an editorial which appeared in the Jackson "Daily News" January 19, 1939, and which said in part, "The statement that American life insurance companies paid policyholders more than three billion dollars last year is a reminder of the continued indispensability of individual social security as distinguished from the new system administered by the government. No scheme of governmentally enforced thrift can ever take the place of individual voluntary provision for emergencies and future needs."

With frequent reference to the Bible, Mr. Denson recommended a little formula by which man may earn his "Daily Bread." He called it the "4-5-4 formula" composed of three words, the first one with four letters, the second five and the third four. The formula is pray-study-work.

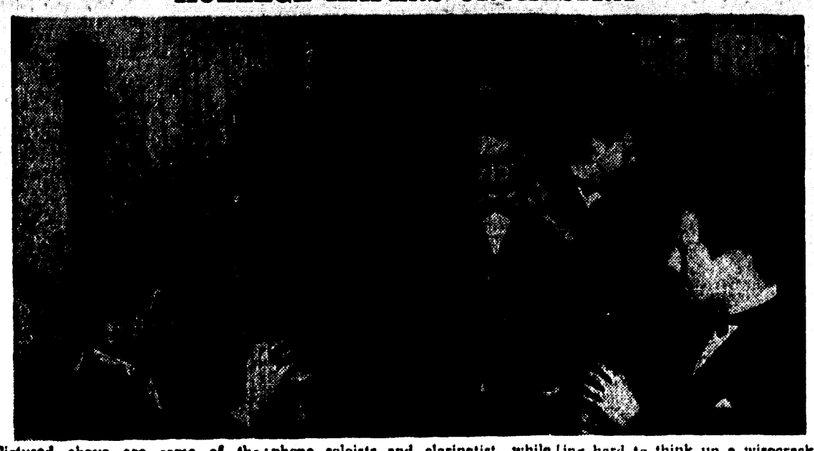
KOLLEGE KAPERS ORCHESTRA



Pictured above are some of the members of the 15-piece Kollege Kapers orchestra. The candid cameraman "snapped" them recently just before curtain time as they were trying out a new ending for one of their swing numbers. Parry ("Dugal") Stewart, star trumpeter for the past four years, hits a high one with Sam Peters, saxophone soloists and clarinetist, while Adam West, drum-major of the band and trap-drummer for the orchestra joins in. Winifred Boles, pianist, adds a little more make-up to Charles Peters' cheeks so that he will look his best when he leaves his trumpet to vocalize later on during the program. James Bains (in background) is trying hard to think up a wisecrack for his dummy, Ted O'Toole, while Charles Knight, third trumpeter, takes a last look at the music list.

The entire Kapers group numbering 35 collegiates and co-eds will present their 90-minute variety show in the Ouachita Parish High school auditorium on Wednesday night, March 15, at 8 o'clock.

The night circles of the Methodist Women's Missionary society are sponsoring the performance in Monroe for the sixth consecutive year.

M'GUIRE GOLF CLUB SIGNS LONG LEASE

The McGuire Park Golf club has signed a lease with the city of West Monroe for a period of ten years at a nominal rental whereby the golf club is required to maintain and operate the property for this purpose. The deal was consummated at a meeting of the West Monroe city council the past week.

Appearing before the council in connection with the lease were M. C. McDonald and B. Beasley. In a discussion that took place it was pointed out that during the past four and one-half years, under the old lease, the golf club has spent more than $20,000 in constructing, maintaining and operating the course, making it one of the best in the south. Still further improvements are proposed and the area leased will be enlarged so as to include the land that was formerly occupied by the grandstand and stock pens of the West Monroe Rodeo association.

The new lease reserves to the city a strip of land on the south side of the property, extending its entire length from east to west, of sufficient width to make a 30-foot blacktop street connecting Trenton and North Seventh streets.

MOST OF STATE'S CROP LAND UNDER COVERAGE OF AAA

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—(Special)—The Agricultural Adjustment administration estimated today that 83 per cent of all Louisiana crop land was covered by the various phases of the 1937 conservation program.

While the state has 4,924,636 acres of crop land, applications came in for 64,100 farms totalling 4,085,000 acres. This was an unusually high proportion, inasmuch the average for the southern region was 66.4 per cent and for the United States, 64.8 per cent.

AAA paid $6,588,000 to 127,000 farmers, an average of $51.64. Payments throughout the nation averaged $81.93 and ranged from $35.45 in New Hampshire to $348.40 in Arizona. For cotton participation, Louisiana farmers received $3,844,000, and for rice $1,104,000 and for sugar $619,000, making up the bulk of their payments.

For this federal cash, they diverted 338,000 acres of cotton land and 5,500 acres that had been in general crops. They seeded 280,500 acres to grasses and hay.

These statistics came out in a report made by AAA to show its "accomplishments in conservation of soil fertility and protection of farm income."

In addition to the payments, the government, through the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, bought $664,725 worth of rice, $278,414 of cottonseed oil, $3,304 of cabbage and $1,166 of cotton fabric in the state. The transportation bill was an additional $163,511. These purchases were made between July 1, 1937 and May 6, 1938.

Discussing the influence of the program on the general farm income and on specific crops, AAA estimated that gross cash income for cotton during the last 5 years was $200,000,000 higher (excluding benefit payments) than it would have been without the program. INSURANCE MEN HOLD BANQUET

Life insurance men of north Louisiana attended a group meeting at Hotel Frances Saturday noon when the guest speaker was J. Lee Denson, state president of the Mississippi association.

A. N. Robinson, president of the northeast Louisiana association, was toastmaster. He introduced the guests who included besides Mr. Denson, Louie E. Throgmorton, president of the Louisiana State association; M. O. Carter, president of the Shreveport association; and Grady Nelson, Shreveport.

Mr. Denson spoke on the theme, "Daily Bread." He said in part:

"Men have two natural enemies, death and incapacity. Either may cheat him of years required for his family. The common adversities of year after year rob him of accumulated surplus and in 95 cases out of every 100 men come to the age of 65 either dead or in poverty.

"Through some medium of consistent thrift man must provide for these inescapable emergencies. Easily and quickly gotten gains slip easily and quickly away. The consistent savings squeezed out of the smaller income becomes the sweeter, the most sacred, and the most carefully preserved. To this end, sixty-five million American citizens have banded themselves together in the greatest enterprise of all time and have pooled their assets of nearly thirty billion dollars, which together with future pledges will build an ultimate hope chest for American citizens of the staggering sum of one hundred and ten billion dollars. That enterprise is Life Insurance."

Mr. Denson quoted from an editorial which appeared in the Jackson "Daily News" January 19, 1939, and which said in part, "The statement that American life insurance companies paid policyholders more than three billion dollars last year is a reminder of the continued indispensability of individual social security as distinguished from the new system administered by the government. No scheme of governmentally enforced thrift can ever take the place of individual voluntary provision for emergencies and future needs."

With frequent reference to the Bible, Mr. Denson recommended a little formula by which man may earn his "Daily Bread." He called it the "4-5-4 formula" composed of three words, the first one with four letters, the second five and the third four. The formula is pray-study-work.

KOLLEGE KAPERS ORCHESTRA

Pictured above are some of the members of the 15-piece Kollege Kapers orchestra. The candid cameraman "snapped" them recently just before curtain time as they were trying out a new ending for one of their swing numbers. Parry ("Dugal") Stewart, star trumpeter for the past four years, hits a high one with Sam Peters, saxophone soloists and clarinetist, while Adam West, drum-major of the band and trap-drummer for the orchestra joins in. Winifred Boles, pianist, adds a little more make-up to Charles Peters' cheeks so that he will look his best when he leaves his trumpet to vocalize later on during the program. James Bains (in background) is trying hard to think up a wisecrack for his dummy, Ted O'Toole, while Charles Knight, third trumpeter, takes a last look at the music list.

The entire Kapers group numbering 35 collegiates and co-eds will present their 90-minute variety show in the Ouachita Parish High school auditorium on Wednesday night, March 15, at 8 o'clock.

The night circles of the Methodist Women's Missionary society are sponsoring the performance in Monroe for the sixth consecutive year.

M'GUIRE GOLF CLUB SIGNS LONG LEASE

The McGuire Park Golf club has signed a lease with the city of West Monroe for a period of ten years at a nominal rental whereby the golf club is required to maintain and operate the property for this purpose. The deal was consummated at a meeting of the West Monroe city council the past week.

Appearing before the council in connection with the lease were M. C. McDonald and B. Beasley. In a discussion that took place it was pointed out that during the past four and one-half years, under the old lease, the golf club has spent more than $20,000 in constructing, maintaining and operating the course, making it one of the best in the south. Still further improvements are proposed and the area leased will be enlarged so as to include the land that was formerly occupied by the grandstand and stock pens of the West Monroe Rodeo association.

The new lease reserves to the city a strip of land on the south side of the property, extending its entire length from east to west, of sufficient width to make a 30-foot blacktop street connecting Trenton and North Seventh streets.

MOST OF STATE'S CROP LAND UNDER COVERAGE OF AAA

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—(Special)—The Agricultural Adjustment administration estimated today that 83 per cent of all Louisiana crop land was covered by the various phases of the 1937 conservation program.

While the state has 4,924,636 acres of crop land, applications came in for 64,100 farms totalling 4,085,000 acres. This was an unusually high proportion, inasmuch the average for the southern region was 66.4 per cent and for the United States, 64.8 per cent.

AAA paid $6,558,000 to 127,000 farmers, an average of $51.64. Payments throughout the nation averaged $81.93 and ranged from $35.45 in New Hampshire to $348.40 in Arizona. For cotton participation, Louisiana farmers received $3,844,000, and for rice $1,104,000 and for sugar $619,000, making up the bulk of their payments.

For this federal cash, they diverted 338,000 acres of cotton land and 5,500 acres that had been in general crops. They seeded 280,500 acres to grasses and hay.

These statistics came out in a report made by AAA to show its "accomplishments in conservation of soil fertility and protection of farm income."

In addition to the payments, the government, through the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, bought $664,785 worth of rice, $378,414 of cottonseed oil, $3,304 of cabbage and $1,166 of cotton fabric in the state. The transportation bill was an additional $163,511. These purchases were made between July 1, 1937 and May 6, 1938.

Discussing the influence of the program on the general farm income and on specific crops, AAA estimated that gross cash income for cotton during the last 5 years was $200,000,000 higher (excluding benefit payments) than it would have been without the programs. Income, minus federal checks, was approximately $3,900,000,000. Without any program, AAA estimated, the income would have been $3,700,000,000.

Militarization Of The CCC

Repeatedly squelched in the past, the proposal to include military training in the CCC regime has bobbed up again.

Though no responsible military authority has asked or even indorsed the plan, it continues to be advanced.

Congress can not too definitely reject this proposal, once and for all.

It is bad in theory. It is bad in practice.

First, the theory. Not even the most rabid backers of increased armament have as yet suggested universal military service for the United States. Yet it is proposed to subject to military training a single class of young men—those who have not been able to find a place in industrial life.

This is undemocratic. If military training is to be established on anything like a universal basis, then let all youths be subject to it. Even the totalitarian states do this, and at its worst, their military program has the merit of taking everybody without distinction. The draft of World war days at least had the merit of taking everybody.

But this proposal would train as soldiers a particular segment of the country's youth, leaving those in more fortunate circumstances untouched.

To advance any such program in a democratic country, whose foundation is in the equal treatment of all regardless of their circumstances, is a grave mistake.

Second, the practical side. The value of any such training, with six hours a week of military training sandwiched in with the regular week's work, is highly doubtful.

The CCC is a work program. It is and is meant to be a civilian program, as indicated plainly by its name "Civilian Conservation Corps." The aim is to furnish productive work to young men who have not been able to find a place in regular jobs, meanwhile teaching them as much as possible to qualify them for regular jobs when they get out.

Military training doesn't fit into his picture at all. It would merely disrupt the work without providing military training of any value whatever.

The CCC has done a fine job, as almost everybody admits. To mix it all up (at great expense) with military training would ruin its record as a work organization, provide no worthwhile military resources to the nation, and flout the basic democratic principle that if one young man owes military service to his country, all owe it.

TIMELY WPA PROBE

It is gratifying to note that, through the efforts of Colonel F. C. Harrington, national WPA administrator, a thorough check of relief lists has been instituted with a view to the elimination of all ineligibles.

There can be no doubt as to the timeliness of the move. The spring months should mean the opening up of numerous employment opportunities in agriculture and industry. A proportionate reduction of WPA expenditures should then be made.

Studies made by several outstanding non-partisan agencies have clearly indicated that the moment has arrived for an increasingly critical attitude toward employment under the WPA. If this were not done, the gigantic and costly system of public gratuities would become so firmly entrenched that the American people would never be able to escape the burden.

Colonel Harrington will make an extremely important contribution to the national welfare by pressing the present inquiry to its logical conclusion. Sympathy for the unemployed must not be allowed to obscure the actualities of sound fiscal procedure or the dictates of honesty and merit in all applications for public assistance.

SUPERSTITION

Tut or Mr. Tutt, neither one nor the other, excited any great degree of awe in the heart of Howard Carter. He defied the "curse" of the Pharaohs and lived 16 years to prove its emptiness. Discoverer of the famous tomb of the Egyptian king in 1922, he ate, slept and lived in its chambers while at work uncovering its secret. He was indifferent to the warning "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh." He was not afraid when six weeks after the crypt was opened his backer, Lord Carnarvon, equally under the "curse," died strangely after the bite of a mosquito. The passing of a score of the expedition's employes failed to shake his contempt for the myth. He died at last at the reasonably mature age of 66, satisfied that the "curse" was commyrot.

There is little doubt that Carter possessed courage and common sense. Those who recall the emphasis laid at the time of Lord Carnarvon's death upon the story of the "curse" and the revival of that emphasis when others of the party succumbed can appreciate how great was the power of suggestion and the caliber of mind needed to resist it. Many an otherwise level-headed individual can be found catering secretly to some silly superstition.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—If running the manifold affairs of WPA gets Colonel Francis P. Harrington down, it won't be the colonel's fault. He believes in putting a job in its place.

Most Washington office-holders tell you that they are on practically 24-hour duty—take work home at night, come down Sundays, live for their work, never have a chance to exercise or relax. But not the WPA administrator.

Colonel Harrington figures that if a man has to work overtime day in and day out it's probably the man's fault rather than the job's. He recalls that when he first came to WPA as assistant administrator in the fall of 1935 he had to work 14 or 15 hours a day.

At the time, Mrs. Harrington once remarked to Mrs. Harry Hopkins that WPA ought to be called HWA—Home-Wrecking administration. But the colonel soon got his job tamed so that it only called for normal office hours.

Works Some Holidays

Nowadays he gets down to work about 9:30 in the morning and goes home around 6 or 6:30 in the evening. He steals a march on the job by coming down on holidays, now and then, and getting in three or four hours of concentrated work. Then, he explains, "these telephones leave me alone." He figures he will presently have things systematized so that he can move quitting time up a bit. But he'll never belong to the two-hours-for-lunch fraternity.

Following graduation from the United States Military academy in 1908, Harrington entered the army engineer corps. He had charge of a construction crew during building of the Panama canal and later oversaw maintenance there. When America entered the war, he gave up a mathematics teaching post at West Point to serve as instructor in officers' training camps. He is a graduate of several United States service schools and attended the Ecole Superieure de Guerre in Paris. The colonel celebrated birthday 51 last fall.

He looks as fit as a youngster fresh out of West Point. He has a clear, pinkish complexion—his nickname, among his friends, is "Pinkie" and neat grayish hair. He looks military, even in civilian clothes, but isn't the crisp, damn-you-my-man type at all. When you call on him he lolls far back in his chair with his feet up and smokes a cigarette.

Believes In His Job

He likes his present job—says it's more work than the assignments he had in the army engineer corps, but more fun too. He is inclined to think that WPA or something like it will be with us for quite a while yet, although he hopes that as business picks up the WPA roll can be cut down to a million men or less. This, he suspects, may take a couple of years.

He believes that WPA offers a chance to make a real contribution to the solution of one of the nation's toughest problems—what to do about the unemployed—and points out that since population growth adds half a million men to the ranks of the workers each year the problem may be a long time getting solved.

As an army engineer, Colonel Harrington has had plenty of experience with civilian workers on construction jobs in private industry. He says it isn't quite fair to ask him to compare those workers with the WPA crews.

The private contractors pick the best men they can get, and the age level in their crews is substantially lower than in WPA. Those allowances made, he adds, the WPA crews can stand the comparison very well.

Speedy On Decisions

If the army and WPA ever throw the colonel out, he can always get a job as copy-reader on a newspaper. When his staff brings documents of one sort and another for revision and editorial correction, he takes a pencil and goes through the copy with lightning speed. An ex-newspaperman on his staff calls him the best copy-reader he ever saw (which may come under the heading of damning with faint praise).

The colonel knows how to delegate authority, and refuses to let paper work pile up on his desk. He doesn't make snap judgments, but once he has passed on a problem or a job he doesn't go back and worry about it. He may take his time about saying something, but when he says it, it goes.

Colonel Harrington lives in a house in Georgetown with his mother and daughter. He is a widower, Mrs. Harrington having died a little more than a year ago. He has one son, a student at Yale.

JIMMIE FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, March 11.—I've been thinking about Herbert Mundin, killed in an auto crash the other day. Many people, reviewing his life story, would say that he had accomplished very little. He built no bridges, authored no labor-saving inventions, designed no buildings for new generations to admire. He didn't contribute one single item to the world's material wealth. He was just a comedian—a homely little fellow in motley and bells who drifted through life with no other purpose than to make the rest of us laugh. Like most actors, he was a drone in a world of very busy bees.

But he DID make us laugh—and it seems to me that this old world—with its chin hanging way down to the South Pole—badly needs laughter. I don't think anyone ever talked to Herb Mundin without forgetting a few of his worries and woes. I remember a day during the filming of "Mutiny on the Bounty"—a mighty blue day for me, for the depression had just wiped out most of the property I had struggled to acquire during the preceding boom years. Mundin started telling funny stories from his inexhaustible fund. I resented them at first but there was something so infectious about that twinkling little Cockney that finally I began to laugh. And with the laugh I began to think straight again. I'll always be humbly grateful to Herbert Mundin for the tonic he gave me that day.

It seems to me that the busy bees need the drones as much as the drones need the workers. The Herbert Mundins of this world leave no tangible evidence of their existence, but I wonder how long industry could drive ahead without them, and without the stimulation of—a laugh.

When Leatrice Joy created a seven-day sensation by pioneering Hollywood's first ultra-boyish haircut. When Eric von Stroheim formally challenged an insolent extra to a saber duel. When Irene Rich, working in "Brawn of the North," tumbled off a dog sled into a deep snow bank and the whole troupe took time off to dig her out. The furore about the elopement of Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey reminds me of the dither occasioned in the Twentieth Century-Fox cafe the other day when the glamourous one entered on the arm of her groom-to-be. Such a buzz of whispered comment, such a craning of necks, such artifice to gain an introduction! Hollywood, having known a steady parade of glamour queens for some twenty years, should be blase by now, but Hollywood is no such thing. Leaving, I remarked to the girl at the cigaret counter that the expression on every male face in that room was a great she retorted cannily, "but not so great tribute to the Lamarr beauty. 'Yes,' a compliment as the envy on every woman's face!"

George Burns is telling an amusing story which reveals the attitude of the typical fan spectator at a swank premiere. The other evening he discovered that he had one extra ticket for an ultra affair at the Carthay circle, and, having always felt a bit sorry for the "can't-get-ins" who stand outside the ropes, he decided to give one of them a break. He offered the ducat to an elderly woman who was in the front of the jam—and met a flat rebuff. "What," she countered, "Give up my place here just when the stars are commencing to arrive! Are you crazy?"

Human Side Of The News

(Copyright, 1939, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The curse of the Egyptian king, Tut-ankh-Amen, burned with a very slow fuse in the case of Howard Carter, desecrator of the king's tomb. The distinguished English archaeologist, who literally stumbled upon the boy king's tomb and its glorious treasures of gold and jewels and objects of art, lived 17 years after he broke through the sealed walls of Tut-ankh-Amen's sepulcher in 1922 and stood, speechless with wonder and joy, before the solid gold curtain which shielded the solid gold coffins of this king who had returned to the bosom of Osiris 1,400 years before the birth of Christ.

More than a treasure was found in this underground resting place of a king who had reigned 33 centuries ago. A curse was written there, written upon a wall, leveling the wrath of the gods against any and all who should break the seal of the sepulcher and violate the sanctity of the pharaoh's sleep.

It was worded like the malediction found in 1879 in the tomb of Khapa Amen, who was a high priest in the reign of King Meneptha, the pharaoh who drove Moses and the children of Israel out of Egypt, who pursued them with chariots to the Red sea which kindly parted its waters to let the chosen people through, but immediately closed upon the Egyptian soldiery and drowned them.

"O man or woman with averted face; to whom I conceds nothing and whom I do not permit to bring light to my body, I stand against thee with spears of fire, and the sharp teeth of lions, and the magic of Isis and Nephthys. My body is purified with the holy water of Heliopolis and by the spell of Anubis. May the cobra on my head spit flames of fire into thy face and may thy head be in the place of thy feet. Such a curse is the vengeance which is hidden in my body until all eternity and which shall overtake whomsoever disturbs my body in its tomb. He or she shall have no grave, and after an arduous journey shall be attacked by wild beasts and his or her bones left to be washed by the falling rain."

These old priests of Egypt were thoroughgoing cursers when they put their hands to it, and there are many curious tales of how their curses worked out. For example, there is a tale in Cairo that the mummy of Khapa Amen was purchased by Lord Harrington of England, and that, shortly afterward while on a hunting trip in the Sudan, Lord Harrington was killed by an elephant. He was buried on the trail and later when an attempt was made to find his grave so the body might be brought to England, it was discovered that the rain had washed all traces of it away, so that it was never found.

When Howard Carter, searching blindly in the Valley of Kings for a tomb he knew to be there, but which had never been discovered, came upon steps cut out of the bed rock, and after he had moved 70,000 tons of sand and gravel, he was accompanied by a dozen white assistants directing the labors of hundreds of natives.

The curse of Tut-ankh-Amen should have fallen upon all but most especially upon Howard Carter. It is true that, before even a few years had passed, several deaths occurred which were difficult to explain, and the legend persisted that an Egyptian king, dead more than 30 centuries, continued to reach out and drag living men to their graves. But Mr. Carter lived on, though in poor health, until just the other day, distinguished for the greatest archaeological find in modern times.

When he finally broke through the last sealed doorway, he could glimpse, even in the dim light, the glint of gold. As the scene grew clearer, a whole roomful of objects came into view—couches, chairs, alabaster vases, chariots, a throne, stools and chests, all glistening with inlay and gold, and a sealed doorway leading still beyond. When the doorway was opened, a wall of gold was revealed—the side of an immense gilt shrine shielding the sarcophagus of the buried king. The tomb consisted of four chambers, each enclosed by golden doors and containing more than 600 groups of precious objects. In the innermost chamber Mr. Carter found the sarcophagus, each of its four corners carved in high relief with one of the four guardian goddesses. Within the monument the king lay, enclosed in three coffins, nested one within the other and each forming an effigy of the monarch. The inmost coffin, enclosing the mummy of the king, was of solid gold.

The body of the king was bound in bandages of fine linen and his head was protected by a solid gold mask. He was profusely anointed with sacred unguents and covered with amulets and emblems. It was 10 years before this ancient treasure could be conveyed to the museum of antiquities in Cairo. Thereafter Mr. Carter returned to England, cherishing the ambition to search Asia Minor for the lost tomb of Alexander the Great. Continued ill health deprived him of another great adventure. And now he has gone to that bourne where such secrets, doubtless, are of little consequence.

How an Office Seeker Killed Garfield

HARDLY had James A. Garfield taken the office of President in 1881 when tall, mustached Charles J. Guiteau dogged his steps. Guiteau, 42 years old, son of a Freeport, Ill., banker, was a lawyer in Chicago before Garfield's election and long since had been called eccentric.

Soon after the Garfield family moved into the White House Guiteau appeared at the executive mansion asking for the post of minister to Austria. Day after day he picketed the President's offices without success. He would sit quietly for hours in the reception room, speaking to no one, apparently oblivious of the stream of visitors. Finally, after several weeks he began writing scores of letters on White House stationery. At length the presidential secretaries barred him from their offices.

But Guiteau was imperturbed. Next he picketed the state department offices, still demanding the Austrian post. When told there was no chance whatever he said he would be content with the French consulate post. Then the state department excluded him.

Several days later Guiteau got his revenge. He shot Garfield in a Washington railroad station, once in the arm and once in the back. Garfield died subsequently and Guiteau was hanged for his crime.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

Katy is six. Her mother was never taught about the nature of children. She knows only what she experienced, and she was brought up by a hard aunt who had children of her own and obliged to earn a living for all of the brood. Her aunt's method of discipline was a short cut to peace. "You do this and I'll do that to you." Now that Katy has to be reared her mother follows the old pattern. Maybe she gets a certain satisfaction out of it for the days she suffered under the harsh rule of eye for eye.

"Did you spill that water? Go get a rag. Wipe it up. Now come here and get your smacks. Three smacks for spilling water. Now you sit on that chair until dinner time."

"O, you forgot to shut the door, did you? Well, I'll give you something to help your memory. Five strokes with the switch will help you to remember that doors have hinges."

Now Katy has become a thorn in her mother's flesh. She thinks up things to do that provoke her mother—the more destructive the better—and she does not mind the smacks and the switches beyond the minute. Punishment has become a game between her and her mother. But mother has wearied of it and wants a way out. She says Katy is bad, plain bad. No child would torment its own mother as she does if she weren't plain bad. She forgets that she started the game and enjoyed it until it began going against her.

There is always the danger of this sort when discipline becomes tit for tat. Making of rules is the making of trouble always. It is a great mistake to lay down a rule and set a punishment because the conditions of the act are never twice the same. That means the punishment does not fit. Better treat each emergency as it rises. Better be free of rules and regulations regarding a child's behavior so that one is free to act with what wisdom one can muster.

Household rules should be general. It is better to hold that good manners are a family characteristic, something expected of everyone, than to set the rule: "Any child who interrupts another person when he is talking has to be silenced for the half day and stay in his room one hour." The interruption might be necessary, or it might be excusable. Leave room for interpretation of the situation always. And don't tempt children to dramatic infringements of ordinary discipline by fixing penalties.

The same principle holds in school management. It is a mistake to announce laws and penalties. "Any pupil found writing on the walls," etc., is a direct invitation to the pupil who loves nothing better than a contest with the authorities. All he needs is a suggestion and he starts to work. Then precious time and energy are wasted on hunting him. And if he is found, what of it? Better take cleanliness and the care of the building for granted and attend to any offense against them when it comes.

Punishment is necessary only when it helps the offender to a better understanding of himself and other people. Severity is useless.

Mr. Patri has prepared a leaflet entitled, "The Shy Child," in which he tells parents how to help children overcome shyness and fear. Send for it, addressing your request to Mr. Angelo Patri, Child Psychology Department, News-Star—World Publishing company. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By Preston Grover

WASHINGTON—A century-old battle between the states and federal government over which owns the tide bottom out to the three-mile limit has blossomed anew with the conflict centering about a politically dangerous commodity—oil.

Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, has just asked congress in a letter to lay claim to California's off-shore oil lands. The idea, he explains, is to give the federal government a stronger basis for a suit to determine which—state or federal government—may grant leases or refuse leases, as the case may be.

The thing started on a far broader scale. Senator Nye of North Dakota (no sea coast of its own) introduced a bill last session laying federal claim not only to California's off-shore oil beds, but to all off-shore sea bottom—Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico and Pacific. It directed the attorney general to begin suit to establish federal ownership before the oil was all pumped out.

Nye steered the bill through the senate before anybody really took notice. When it reached the house, alert Texas and California members shunted it into the judiciary committee headed by astute Representative Sumners of Texas, and gave it the ride of its life.

Three States Lead Fight

Practically every sea coast state in the union sent lawyers to fight it. Most concerned were:

Texas—Which has valuable off-shore oil fields returning fat income to state schools.

Louisiana—With newly developed off-shore fields.

California—With tremendously rich oil beds near Los Angeles harbor and at Long Beach.

Navy lawyers asserted that the federal government should lay claim to every inch of sea bottom—and all beneath it—out to the three-mile limit. By the time New York, Florida, Mississippi and a covey of other coastal states had put in an appearance, advocates of federal ownership were weakening.

The 13 original states argued that they surrendered no sea bottom to the federal government. Texas insisted it had not when it came in as an independent republic. Other states seemed to have shakier claims.

Ultimately the bill was rewritten to cover only California. Representative Sam Hobbs of Alabama maneuvered it out of judiciary committee late last session, but it died in rules committee.

Edison Revives Dispute

The letter of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison started the fight again this session—with California as trial horse for the whole show.

Meantime the whole California sea coast is jittery, not to mention the jitters by proxy along the gulf and Atlantic coast. San Francisco, from the Montgomery street financial district to the harbor, once was below the low tide line. Property owners got their titles from the state. What happens to their titles if the federal government should establish ownership?

What would happen to property rights in New York harbor, to Atlantic City's outreaching amusement piers? To Texas and Louisiana oil fields?

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health

Fifty-two years ago an eminent Boston physician, Reginald Fitz, studied infections within the abdomen and described the nature of appendicitis so definitely that it has since that time been recognized as a special disease.

Today it is estimated that 20,000 people die every year from this condition in the United States. Though we now know much more about it and how to take care of it than formerly, there seems to be about 15 times as much appendicitis as was recorded in 1885. According to Dr. D. C. Collins, the number of deaths has increased during the last quarter of a century.

Of course, many cases are now recognized as appendicitis which formerly would have gone undiagnosed and in which the deaths would have been recorded as being due to peritonitis or some other condition.

For this reason hospitals and institutions throughout the country are constantly studying the causes of appendicitis which come to their attention and also the reasons for the deaths which occur.

Without any question, one of the important causes is the occurrence inside the appendix (as determined at the time of operation) of small concretions or hard substance which bring about irritation, inflammation and secondary infection. There are, of course, also instances in which the infection seems to come into the appendix by way of the blood. There may, however, also be inflammation of the tissue of the appendix itself resulting from some associated condition in the bowel, this inflammation acting to obstruct the emptying of the bowel so as to permit development of an acute infection.

Obviously, people ought to be more careful about eating substances which might form the basis of a concretion, such as indigestible seeds, bones, or fibrous material.

One of the most common causes of death in appendicitis is the taking of drastic cathartics, which irritate the bowel and trend to bring about a rupture of the appendix. If the condition can be diagnosed and suitably controlled by operation before the rupture occurs there is much less danger.

A severe pain in the abdomen, vomiting, fever and tenderness in the right lower one-fourth of the abdomen makes a combination of serious symptoms.

When the doctor is called he will want a count of the white blood cells. Until appendicitis is ruled out, never take a cathartic for pain in the abdomen.

Militarization Of The CCC

Repeatedly squelched in the past, the proposal to include military training in the CCC regime has bobbed up again.

Though no responsible military authority has asked or even indorsed the plan, it continues to be advanced.

Congress can not too definitely reject this proposal, once and for all.

It is bad in theory. It is bad in practice.

First, the theory. Not even the most rabid backers of increased armament have as yet suggested universal military service for the United States. Yet it is proposed to subject to military training a single class of young men—those who have not been able to find a place in industrial life.

This is undemocratic. If military training is to be established on anything like a universal basis, then let all youths be subject to it. Even the totalitarian states do this, and at its worst, their military program has the merit of taking everybody without distinction. The draft of World war days at least had the merit of taking everybody.

But this proposal would train as soldiers a particular segment of the country's youth, leaving those in more fortunate circumstances untouched.

To advance any such program in a democratic country, whose foundation is in the equal treatment of all regardless of their circumstances, is a grave mistake.

Second, the practical side. The value of any such training, with six hours a week of military training sandwiched in with the regular week's work, is highly doubtful.

The CCC is a work program. It is and is meant to be a civilian program, as indicated plainly by its name "Civilian Conservation Corps." The aim is to furnish productive work to young men who have not been able to find a place in regular jobs, meanwhile teaching them as much as possible to qualify them for regular jobs when they get out.

Military training doesn't fit into his picture at all. It would merely disrupt the work without providing military training of any value whatever.

The CCC has done a fine job, as almost everybody admits. To mix it all up (at great expense) with military training would ruin its record as a work organization, provide no worthwhile military resources to the nation, and flout the basic democratic principle that if one young man owes military service to his country, all owe it.

TIMELY WPA PROBE

It is gratifying to note that, through the efforts of Colonel F. C. Harrington, national WPA administrator, a thorough check of relief lists has been instituted with a view to the elimination of all ineligibles.

There can be no doubt as to the timeliness of the move. The spring months should mean the opening up of numerous employment opportunities in agriculture and industry. A proportionate reduction of WPA expenditures should then be made.

Studies made by several outstanding non-partisan agencies have clearly indicated that the moment has arrived for an increasingly critical attitude toward employment under the WPA. If this were not done, the gigantic and costly system of public gratuities would become so firmly entrenched that the American people would never be able to escape the burden.

Colonel Harrington will make an extremely important contribution to the national welfare by pressing the present inquiry to its logical conclusion. Sympathy for the unemployed must not be allowed to obscure the actualities of sound fiscal procedure or the dictates of honesty and merit in all applications for public assistance.

SUPERSTITION

Tut or Mr. Tutt, neither one nor the other, excited any great degree of awe in the heart of Howard Carter. He defied the "curse" of the Pharaohs and lived 16 years to prove its emptiness. Discoverer of the famous tomb of the Egyptian king in 1922, he ate, slept and lived in its chambers while at work uncovering its secret. He was indifferent to the warning "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh." He was not afraid when six weeks after the crypt was opened his backer, Lord Carnarvon, equally under the "curse," died strangely after the bite of a mosquito. The passing of a score of the expedition's employes failed to shake his contempt for the myth. He died at last at the reasonably mature age of 66, satisfied that the "curse" was tommyrot.

There is little doubt that Carter possessed courage and common sense. Those who recall the emphasis laid at the time of Lord Carnarvon's death upon the story of the "curse" and the revival of that emphasis when others of the party succumbed can appreciate how great was the power of suggestion and the caliber of mind needed to resist it. Many an otherwise level-headed individual can be found catering secretly to some silly superstition.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—If running the manifold affairs of WPA gets Colonel Francis P. Harrington down, it won't be the colonel's fault. He believes in putting a job in its place.

Most Washington office-holders tell you that they are on practically 24-hour duty—take work home at night, come down Sundays, live for their work, never have a chance to exercise or relax. But not the WPA administrator.

Colonel Harrington figures that if a man has to work overtime day in and day out it's probably the man's fault rather than the job's. He recalls that when he first came to WPA as assistant administrator in the fall of 1935 he had to work 14 or 15 hours a day.

At the time, Mrs. Harrington once remarked to Mrs. Harry Hopkins that WPA ought to be called HWA—Home-Wrecking administration. But the colonel soon got his job tamed so that it only called for normal office hours.

Works Some Holidays

Nowadays he gets down to work about 9:30 in the morning and goes home around 6 or 6:30 in the evening. He steals a march on the job by coming down on holidays, now and then, and getting in three or four hours of concentrated work. Then, he explains, "these telephones leave me alone." He figures he will presently have things systematized so that he can move quitting time up a bit. But he'll never belong to the two-hours-for-lunch fraternity.

Following graduation from the United States Military academy in 1908, Harrington entered the army engineer corps. He had charge of a construction crew during building of the Panama canal and later oversaw maintenance there. When America entered the war, he gave up a mathematics teaching post at West Point to serve as instructor in officers' training camps. He is a graduate of several United States service schools and attended the Ecole Superieure de Guerre in Paris. The colonel celebrated birthday 51 last fall.

He looks as fit as a youngster fresh out of West Point. He has a clear, pinkish complexion—his nickname, among his friends, is "Pinkie" and neat grayish hair. He looks military, even in civilian clothes, but isn't the crisp, damn-you-my-man type at all. When you call on him he lolls far back in his chair with his feet up and smokes a cigarette.

He likes his present job—says it's more work than the assignments he had in the army engineer corps, but more fun too. He is inclined to think that WPA or something like it will be with us for quite a while yet, although he hopes that as business picks up the WPA roll can be cut down to a million men or less. This, he suspects, may take a couple of years.

He believes that WPA offers a chance to make a real contribution to the solution of one of the nation's toughest problems—what to do about the unemployed—and points out that since population growth adds half a million men to the ranks of the workers each year the problem may be a long time getting solved.

As an army engineer, Colonel Harrington has had plenty of experience with civilian workers on construction jobs in private industry. He says it isn't quite fair to ask him to compare those workers with the WPA crews.

The private contractors pick the best men they can get, and the age level in their crews is substantially lower than in WPA. Those allowances made, he adds, the WPA crews can stand the comparison very well.

Speedy On Decisions

If the army and WPA ever throw the colonel out, he can always get a job as copy-reader on a newspaper. When his staff brings documents of one sort and another for revision and editorial correction, he takes a pencil and goes through the copy with lightning speed. An ex-newspaperman on his staff calls him the best copy-reader he ever saw (which may come under the heading of damning with faint praise).

The colonel knows how to delegate authority, and refuses to let paper work pile up on his desk. He doesn't make snap judgments, but once he has passed on a problem or a job he doesn't go back and worry about it. He may take his time about saying something, but when he says it, it goes.

Colonel Harrington lives in a house in Georgetown with his mother and daughter. He is a widower, Mrs. Harrington having died a little more than a year ago. He has one son, a student at Yale..

JIMMIE FIDLER In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, March 11.—I've been thinking about Herbert Mundin, killed in an auto crash the other day. Many people, reviewing his life story, would say that he had accomplished very little. He built no bridges, authored no labor-saving inventions, designed no buildings for new generations to admire. He didn't contribute one single item to the world's material wealth. He was just a comedian—a homely little fellow in motley and bells who drifted through life with no other purpose than to make the rest of us laugh. Like most actors, he was a drone in a world of very busy bees.

But he DID make us laugh—and it seems to me that this old world—with its chin hanging way down to the South Pole—badly needs laughter. I don't think anyone ever talked to Herb Mundin without forgetting a few of his worries and woes. I remember a day during the filming of "Mutiny on the Bounty"—a mighty blue day for me, for the depression had just wiped out most of the property I had struggled to acquire during the preceding boom years. Mundin started telling funny stories from his inexhaustible fund. I resented them at first but there was something so infectious about that twinkling little Cockney that finally I began to laugh. And with the laugh I began to think straight again. I'll always be humbly grateful to Herbert Mundin for the tonic he gave me that day.

It seems to me that the busy bees need the drones as much as the drones need the workers. The Herbert Mundins of this world leave no tangible evidence of their existence, but I wonder how long industry could drive ahead without them, and without the stimulation of—a laugh.

Human Side Of The News

(Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The curse of the Egyptian king, Tutankh-Amen, burned with a very slow fuse in the case of Howard Carter, desecrator of the king's tomb. The distinguished English archaeologist, who literally stumbled upon the boy king's tomb and its glorious treasures of gold and jewels and objects of art, lived 17 years after he broke through the sealed walls of Tut-ankh-Amen's sepulcher in 1922 and stood, speechless with wonder and joy, before the solid gold curtain which shielded the solid gold coffins of this king who had returned to the bosom of Osiris 1,400 years before the birth of Christ.

More than a treasure was found in this underground resting place of a king who had reigned 33 centuries ago. A curse was written there, written upon a wall, leveling the wrath of the gods against any and all who should break the seal of the sepulcher and violate the sanctity of the pharaoh's sleep.

It was worded like the malediction found in 1879 in the tomb of Khapa Amen, who was a high priest in the reign of King Meneptha, the pharaoh who drove Moses and the children of Israel out of Egypt, who pursued them with chariots to the Red sea which kindly parted its waters to let the chosen people through, but immediately closed upon the Egyptian soldiery and drowned them.

"O man or woman with averted face; to whom I concede nothing and whom I do not permit to bring light to my body, I stand against thee with spears of fire, and the sharp teeth of lions, and the magic of Isis and Nephthys. My body is purified with the holy water of Heliopolis and by the spell of Anubis. May the cobra on my head spit flames of fire into thy face and may thy head be in the place of thy feet. Such a curse is the vengeance which is hidden in my body until all eternity and which shall overtake whomsoever disturbs my body in its tomb. He or she shall have no grave, and after an arduous journey shall be attacked by wild beasts and his or her bones left to be washed by the falling rain."

These old priests of Egypt were thoroughgoing cursers when they put their hands to it, and there are many curious tales of how their curses worked out. For example, there is a tale in Cairo that the mummy of Khapa Amen was purchased by Lord Harrington of England, and that, shortly afterward while on a hunting trip in the Sudan, Lord Harrington was killed by an elephant. He was buried on the trail and later when an attempt was made to find his grave so the body might be brought to England, it was discovered that the rain had washed all traces of it away, so that it was never found.

When Howard Carter, searching blindly in the Valley of Kings for a tomb he knew to be there, but which had never been discovered, came upon steps cut out of the bed rock, and after he had moved 70,000 tons of sand and gravel, he was accompanied by a dozen white assistants directing the labors of hundreds of natives.

The curse of Tut-ankh-Amen should have fallen upon all but most especially upon Howard Carter. It is true that, before even a few years had passed, several deaths occurred which were difficult to explain, and the legend persisted that an Egyptian king, dead more than 30 centuries, continued to reach out and drag living men to their graves. But Mr. Carter lived on, though in poor health, until just the other day, distinguished for the greatest archaeological find in modern times.

When he finally broke through the last sealed doorway, he could glimpse, even in the dim light, the glint of gold. As the scene grew clearer, a whole roomful of objects came into view—couches, chairs, alabaster vases, chariots, a throne, stools and chests, all glistening with inlay and gold, and a sealed doorway leading still beyond.

When the doorway was opened, a wall of gold was revealed—the side of an immense gilt shrine shielding the sarcophagus of the buried king. The tomb consisted of four chambers, each enclosed by golden doors and containing more than 600 groups of precious objects. In the innermost chamber Mr. Carter found the sarcophagus, each of its four corners carved in high relief with one of the four guardian goddesses. Within the monument the king lay, enclosed in three coffins, nested one within the other and each forming an effigy of the monarch. The inmost coffin, enclosing the mummy of the king, was of solid gold.

The body of the king was bound in bandages of fine linen and his head was protected by a solid gold mask. He was profusely anointed with sacred unguents and covered with amulets and emblems. It was 10 years before this ancient treasure could be conveyed to the museum of antiquities in Cairo. Thereafter Mr. Carter returned to England, cherishing the ambition to search Asia Minor for the lost tomb of Alexander the Great. Continued ill health deprived him of another great adventure. And now he has gone to that bourne where such secrets, doubtless, are of little consequence.

STAMP NEWS

How an Office Seeker Killed Garfield

HARDLY had James A. Garfield taken the office of President in 1681 when tall, mustached Charles J. Guiteau dogged his steps. Guiteau, 42 years old, son of a Freeport, Ill., banker, was a lawyer in Chicago before Garfield's election and long since had been called eccentric.

Soon after the Garfield family moved into the White House Guiteau appeared at the executive mansion asking for the post of minister to Austria. Day after day he picketed the President's offices without success. He would sit quietly for hours in the reception room, speaking to no one, apparently oblivious of the stream of visitors. Finally, after several weeks he began writing scores of letters on White House stationery. At length the presidential secretaries barred him from their offices.

But Guiteau was imperturbed. Next he picketed the state department offices, still demanding the Austrian post. When told there was no chance whatever he said he would be content with the French consulate post. Then the state department excluded him.

Several days later Guiteau got his revenge. He shot Garfield in a Washington railroad station, once in the arm and once in the back. Garfield died subsequently and Guiteau was hanged for his crime.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

Katy is six. Her mother was never taught about the nature of children. She knows only what she experienced, and she was brought up by a hard aunt who had children of her own and obliged to earn a living for all of the brood. Her aunt's method of discipline was a short cut to peace. "You do this and I'll do that to you." Now that Katy has to be reared her mother follows the old pattern. Maybe she gets a certain satisfaction out of it for the days she suffered under the harsh rule of eye for eye.

"Did you spill that water? Go get a rag. Wipe it up. Now come here and get your smacks. Three smacks for spilling water. Now you sit on that chair until dinner time."

"O, you forgot to shut the door, did you? Well, I'll give you something to help your memory. Five strokes with the switch will help you to remember that doors have hinges."

Now Katy has become a thorn in her mother's flesh. She thinks up things to do that provoke her mother—the more destructive the better—and she does not mind the smacks and the switches beyond the minute. Punishment has become a game between her and her mother. But mother has wearied of it and wants a way out. She says Katy is bad, plain bad. No child would torment its own mother as she does if she weren't plain bad. She forgets that she started the game and enjoyed it until it began going against her.

There is always the danger of this sort when discipline becomes tit for tat. Making of rules is the making of trouble always. It is a great mistake to lay down a rule and set a punishment because the conditions of the act are never twice the same. That means the punishment does not fit. Better treat each emergency as it rises. Better be free of rules and regulations regarding a child's behavior so that one is free to act with what wisdom one can muster.

Household rules should be general. It is better to hold that good manners are a family characteristic, something expected of everyone, than to set the rule: "Any child who interrupts another person when he is talking has to be silenced for the half day and stay in his room one hour." The interruption might be necessary, or it might be excusable. Leave room for interpretation of the situation always. And don't tempt children to dramatic infringements of ordinary discipline by fixing penalties.

The same principle holds in school management. It is a mistake to announce laws and penalties. "Any pupil found writing on the walls," etc., is a direct invitation to the pupil who loves nothing better than a contest with the authorities. All he needs is a suggestion and he starts to work. Then precious time and energy are wasted on hunting him. And if he is found, what of it? Better take cleanliness and the care of the building for granted and attend to any offense against them when it comes.

Punishment is necessary only when it helps the offender to a better understanding of himself and other people. Severity is useless.

Mr. Patri has prepared a leaflet entitled, "The Shy Child," in which he tells parents how to help children overcome shyness and fear. Send for it, addressing your request to Mr. Angelo Patri, Child Psychology Department, News-Star—World Publishing company. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By Preston Grover

WASHINGTON—A century-old battle between the states and federal government over which owns the sea bottom out to the three-mile limit has blossomed anew with the conflict centering about a politically dangerous commodity—oil.

Charles Edison, assistant secretary of the navy, has just asked congress in a letter to lay claim to California's off-shore oil lands. The idea, he explains, is to give the federal government a stronger basis for a suit to determine which—state or federal government—may grant leases or refuse leases, as the case may be.

The thing started on a far broader scale. Senator Nye of North Dakota (no sea coast of its own) introduced a bill last session laying federal claim not only to California's off-shore oil beds, but to all off-shore sea bottom—Atlantic, Gulf of Mexico and Pacific. It directed the attorney general to begin suit to establish federal ownership before the oil was all pumped out.

Nye steered the bill through the senate before anybody really took notice. When it reached the house, alert Texas and California members shunted it into the judiciary committee headed by astute Representative Sumners of Texas, and gave it the ride of its life.

Three States Lead Fight

Practically every sea coast state in the union sent lawyers to fight it. Most concerned were:

Texas—Which has valuable off-shore oil fields returning fat income to state schools.

Louisiana—With newly developed off-shore fields.

California—With tremendously rich oil beds near Los Angeles harbor and at Long Beach.

Navy lawyers asserted that the federal government should lay claim to every inch of sea bottom—and all beneath it—out to the three-mile limit. By the time New York, Florida, Mississippi and a covey of other coastal states had put in an appearance, advocates of federal ownership were weakening.

The 13 original states argued that they surrendered no sea bottom to the federal government. Texas insisted it had not when it came in as an independent republic. Other states seemed to have shakier claims.

Ultimately the bill was rewritten to cover only California. Representative Sam Hobbs of Alabama maneuvered it out of judiciary committee late last session, but it died in rules committee.

Edison Revives Dispute

The letter of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison started the fight again this session—with California as trial horse for the whole show.

Meantime the whole California sea coast is jittery, not to mention the jitters by proxy along the gulf and Atlantic coast. San Francisco, from the Montgomery street financial district to the harbor, once was below the low tide line. Property owners got their titles from the state. What happens to their titles if the federal government should establish ownership?

What would happen to property rights in New York harbor, to Atlantic City's outreaching amusement piers? To Texas and Louisiana oil fields?

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health

Fifty-two years ago an eminent Boston physician, Reginald Fitz, studied infections within the abdomen and described the nature of appendicitis so definitely that it has since that time been recognized as a special disease.

Today it is estimated that 20,000 people die every year from this condition in the United States. Though we now know much more about it and how to take care of it than formerly, there seems to be about 15 times as much appendicitis as was recorded in 1885. According to Dr. D. C. Collins, the number of deaths has increased during the last quarter of a century.

Of course, many cases are now recognized as appendicitis which formerly would have gone undiagnosed and in which the deaths would have been recorded as being due to peritonitis or some other condition.

For this reason hospitals and institutions throughout the country are constantly studying the causes of appendicitis which come to their attention and also the reasons for the deaths which occur.

Without any question, one of the important causes is the occurrence inside the appendix (as determined at the time of operation) of small concretions or hard substance which bring about irritation, inflammation and secondary infection. There are, of course, also instances in which the infection seems to come into the appendix by way of the blood. There may, however, also be inflammation of the tissue of the appendix itself resulting from some associated condition in the bowel, this inflammation acting to obstruct the emptying of the bowel so as to permit development of an acute infection.

Obviously, people ought to be more careful about eating substances which might form the basis of a concretion, such as indigestible seeds, bones, or fibrous material.

One of the most common causes of death in appendicitis is the taking of drastic cathartics, which irritate the bowel and trend to bring about a rupture of the appendix. If the condition can be diagnosed and suitably controlled by operation before the rupture occurs there is much less danger.

A severe pain in the abdomen, vomiting, fever and tenderness in the right lower one-fourth of the abdomen makes a combination of serious symptoms.

When the doctor is called he will want a count of the white blood cells. Until appendicitis is ruled out, never take a cathartic for pain in the abdomen.

The Sunday school is beginning today at 9:45 a.m. The lesson is a marvelous manifestation of the power of God who led Peter out of jail and passed guards and delivered him to his friends who were in prayer at the time for his deliverances. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Substance" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, today. Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." (Luke 12.) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Kep to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts."

Services for the third Sunday in Lent are as follows: The Holy Eucharist at 7:30 a. m., church school at 9:30 a. m., and morning prayer and sermon at 10:45; evensong and address on prayer book at 7:30 p. m. The rector will hold service in St. David's, Rayville, at 4 p.m. Evensong will be said and sermon preached on "Meditation." The idea of the Collect, Epistle and Gospel appears to be that of our spiritual dangers from Satan and our spiritual sufficiency in Christ. Sin thwarts God's purposes. First, His purpose for the individual. Think what God might have done in you and through you, if you had always obeyed His voice. You would have gained holiness, the greatest converting voice in all the world. Then, His purposes for the world which He loved so dearly that He sent His Son to redeem it. The seeking, sorrowing, hoping love, with which God pleads and persuades—but never compels. Man's sin is what thwarts the love of God, and delays the bestowal of His blessings on every race and nation. Let us seek God this Lent, while He may be found. Let us resolve to live more nearly like Him.

The church is opened daily from 7:30 a. m. until 5:30 p. m. Come in, rest, pray, give thanks, meditate. You are welcome.

We invite you to be present at the following worship services: Sunday school at 9:45 a.m. Morning worship at 11 o'clock. At this hour the Lord's supper will be taken. We observe this as a Christian ordinance and not merely a membership ordinance. Christian Endeavor at 6:45 p.m. Evangelistic service at 7:30. Circle meetings Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Song service Tuesday evening at 7:30. Prayer service Thursday evening at 7:30.

A young man became a christian. His pastor gladly noted his regular attendance at church, and his evident interest and growth. After a year or two, however, there was a change in him. He was not in his place so regularly, and when he was there, his attention seemed to be wandering. The pastor was troubled. At least he spoke to him. The explanation grieved him. "You know that new manufacturing addition to town? Well, I've bought a lot down there, and have been overseeing the building of two laborers' cottages. I am away on my run (he was a railroad man) every day in the week. Sunday is my only opportunity to go down and see the work, but soon the buildings will be done. I have had them rented for months ahead of time. The net return on my investment will be about fifteen percent. Soon I hope to be more regular." But he never was. His piece of land had usurped Christ's place in his heart. —Selected.

This has been one of the most helpful weeks in the life of the congregation. Dr. Frank Hill Caldwell has brought us messages of illumination and inspiration. Blessed be the Lord for his coming this way! He speaks this morning on the subject, "The Friction of Life." It will be his last sermon. Will you hear him? Will you worship with us to our personal and mutual profit? He returns this evening to Louisville, Ky., to resume his responsibilities as president and professor of homiletics, Louisville Theological seminary.

The Sabbath school attendance was unusually gratifying last Subbath. Three hundred forty-one were present, 305 Monroe and 36 Lamkin. Will you join us this Lord's day in the study of the Word? With your interest and presence, we will have 400, our goal.

March is the month given to the underwriting of the financial support of the church. Have you indicated to the diaconate your part of the budget? Will you on your own initiative call the church office, telephone 1011, or write, or hand in the card which has been mailed you or is yours for the asking? Remember the words of the Lord Jesus when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." "God loveth a cheerful giver."

A hearty welcome awaits you.

Do you believe in answer to prayer? Come and study with us this lesson. We had the largest group present for B. T. U. last Sunday that have ever been known to attend at any previous meeting. We are thankful for the fine spirit which is prevalent in all the services. We have a study course arranged for all classes of B. T. U. beginning next Monday, March 13. Brother Morgan will teach "Our Doctrines" to the adults. The pastor will teach "The Plan of Salvation" to the seniors and Mrs. B. F. Wallace will teach "Training in Christian Service" to the intermediates. We urge all our people to take these training courses.

The pastor will speak at the morning hour Sunday on "The Christian and His Religion" and at the evening hour on "The Kind of Sinners God Saves." Your prayerful interest and presence at all these services will be greatly appreciated by the pastor. If the Christian religion is what the world needs, it is now time for Christians to respond.

The pastor has recovered from a case of "flu" and will occupy the pulpit at both services Sunday, using the following subjects: "The Majority Report" (Numbers 13:31), and "The Lost Book" (Chronicles 34:14).

The congregation was delighted with the services conducted by Rev. L. R. Morgan last Sunday night.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Substance" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, today. Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." (Luke 12.) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Kep to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Hold thought steadfastly to the enduring, the good, and the true, and you will bring these into your experience proportionably to their occupancy of your thoughts."

GRACE CHURCH
Fourth And Glenmar Streets
Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

Services for the third Sunday in Lent are as follows: The Holy Eucharist at 7:30 a. m., church school at 9:30 a. m., and morning prayer and sermon at 10:45; evensong and address on prayer book at 7:30 p. m. The rector will hold service in St. David's, Rayville, at 4 p.m. Evensong will be said and sermon preached on "Meditation." The idea of the Collect, Epistle and Gospel appears to be that of our spiritual dangers from Satan, and our spiritual sufficiency in Christ. Sin thwarts God's purposes. First, His purpose for the individual. Think what God might have done in you and through you, if you had always obeyed His voice. You would have gained holiness, the greatest converting voice in all the world. Then, His purposes for the world which He loved so dearly that He sent His Son to redeem it. The seeking, sorrowing, hoping love, with which God pleads and persuades—but never compels. Man's sin is what thwarts the love of God, and delays the bestowal of His blessings on every race and nation. Let us seek God this Lent, while He may be found. Let us resolve to live more nearly like Him.

The church is opened daily from 7:30 a. m. until 5:30 p. m. Come in, rest, pray, give thanks, meditate. You are welcome.

THE RECTOR.

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
C. Karlos Smith, Pastor-Evangelist
West Monroe

To attend church is a habit, and a very good one at that; it is a privilege all men should take advantage of while they can. We invite you to attend our church and to become a part of a great progressive movement for the best interest of the souls of mankind and the betterment of the city and community in which we live. If the churches were destroyed from our city and community, few people would care to live here. Show which side you are on by attending God's house on the day of worship. Our Sunday school meets at 9:45 a.m. with R. M. McClendon as superintendent. Special music at every service directed by G. C. Williams, assisted by Miss Madia McClendin at the piano and a fine choir of voices.

Preaching services at 11:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Come and hear a genuine gospel message from one who dares to tell all men the truth at all times.

The church with a welcome.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH
Stone Avenue And South Third Street
I. L. Yeager, Pastor

We invite you to be present at the following worship services: Sunday school at 9:45 a.m. Morning worship at 11 o'clock. At this hour the Lord's supper will be taken. We observe this as a Christian ordinance and not merely a membership ordinance. Christian Endeavor at 6:45 p.m. Evangelistic service at 7:30. Circle meetings Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Song service Tuesday evening at 7:30. Prayer service Thursday evening at 7:30.

A young man became a christian. His pastor gladly noted his regular attendance at church, and his evident interest and growth. After a year or two, however, there was a change in him. He was not in his place so regularly, and when he was there, his attention seemed to be wandering. The pastor was troubled. At least he spoke to him. The explanation grieved him. "You know that new manufacturing addition to town? Well, I've bought a lot down there, and have been overseeing the building of two laborers' cottages. I am away on my run (he was a railroad man) every day in the week. Sunday is my only opportunity to go down and see the work, but soon the buildings will be done. I have had them rented for months ahead of time. The net return on my investment will be about fifteen percent. Soon I hope to be more regular." But he never was. His piece of land had usurped Christ's place in his heart. —Selected.

The prayers will bring you closer to the Lord. And the spirit of fellowship will lighten your burdens. The congregation will study the Bible in the Sunday school classes at 9:45 a.m. S. P. Quigley will be in charge. Young people's meetings at 6:30 p.m., O. L. Hoskins, Mrs. E. L. (Ruth) Hoskins, and Miss Marie Venable will lead these groups. Preaching at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. by the pastor. W. F. M. S. Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Prayer meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Grammont At Catalpa
Ernest D. Holloway, Pastor

This has been one of the most helpful weeks in the life of the congregation. Dr. Frank Hill Caldwell has brought us messages of illumination and inspiration. Blessed be the Lord for his coming this way! He speaks this morning on the subject, "The Friction of Life." It will be his last sermon. Will you hear him? Will you worship with us to our personal and mutual profit? He returns this evening to Louisville, Ky., to resume his responsibilities as president and professor of homiletics, Louisville Theological seminary.

The Sabbath school attendance was unusually gratifying last Sabbath. Three hundred forty-one were present, 305 Monroe and 36 Lamkin. Will you join us this Lord's day in the study of the Word? With your interest and presence, we will have 400, our goal.

March is the month given to the underwriting of the financial support of the church. Have you indicated to the diaconate your part of the budget? Will you on your own initiative call the church office, telephone 1011, or write, or hand in the card which has been mailed you or is yours for the asking? Remember the words of the Lord Jesus when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." "God loveth a cheerful giver."

A hearty welcome awaits you.

Let's Be In Gear When the Light Changes

"PROBABLY as always, spring recovery will get under way before anyone realizes it, and when it does, the ones who are left behind will be the ones who didn't get into gear before the light changed."

That's the prediction made in the concluding paragraph of an editorial in the March 3 issue of The Morning World by Willis Thornton, able Newspaper Enterprise Association writer. And it's a warning, as well as a forecast, that should be heeded throughout the nation, including Monroe, West Monroe and Ouachita Parish.

Entitled "Get Off Dead Center," the editorial urges business to accept the federal government's assurance of no tax changes and to lend its efforts toward the overdue economic upturn. It says the next move toward the much-desired revival is up to business.

Mr. Thornton's piece isn't directed at any particular section of the nation. His thoughts apply to Monroe, West Monroe and Ouachita Parish equally as well as to other communities and areas in the United States. He is speaking to and of little business as well as big business.

For that reason, his entire composition bears repetition. Constructively critical, it follows in full:

"While snowflakes still fly in northern cities, nevertheless spring is just where prosperity used to be—'right around the corner.'

"While eyes still watch eagerly for the first crocus and that hardy earliest robin, something else is being watched with closest attention.

"It is the business upturn that is now so long overdue.

"Always a wise and well-balanced man, William Allen White of Emporia, Kan., has something to say about this that deserves wider circulation than is provided even by his justly-famous Gazette.

"Returning from a California vacation, White circulated about his home town and found:

" 'Trade is good, but some way psychology is sagging. We ought to buck up and look around and count our blessings. . . . Times are looking up across the land. It would appear that we are to have a new attitude in our national government. Business is being considered. Commercial street everywhere in Kansas and in the nation is beginning to get a break.'

"White is no Pollyanna. He is best known for the way in which he can look a fact in the face and say 'Hello!'

"The business machine has been idling along in neutral for some time. And nobody knows quite why. Both President Roosevelt and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau have announced that no tax changes are in prospect. That guarantees the tax stability for which so many have cried. The spring building season is about to open, and federal contributions to building will reach their height in early spring.

"Secretary Hopkins is busily attempting to promote that better understanding between the administration and business which is so much to be desired. The stage for revival is set, but the actors refuse to take their places or to speak their lines.

"Prompters Roosevelt, Morgenthau, Hopkins and others have given the cue, not once but several times. It is now up to the actors to pick up their lines and carry on the play.

"The shadow of war hangs over all the world, but more and more people are being convinced that it may not be as black as it has been painted.

"Probably as always, spring recovery will get under way before anyone realizes it, and when it does, the ones who are left behind will be the ones who didn't get into gear before the light changed."

Well, there you are, a fitting conclusion for this series of 26 Sunday articles in the interest of Monroe, West Monroe and Ouachita Parish. Being forewarned, let's make a final resolution—to be in gear when the light changes.

PEACE IN LABOR UP TO ROOSEVELT

Skilful Maneuvering Will Be Required To Bring Groups Together

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Hope for peace in American labor's three-year civil war was pinned tonight on the personal influence of President Roosevelt.

As armistice conferences between representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations progressed from formal to informal stages over the week-end, neutral observers generally were agreed on one point:

The two embattled groups may be brought together if the president can manage to keep the pressure of public opinion centered on the peace efforts.

If that proves impossible—and it is likely to require skilful maneuvering chances of an agreement are not held promising.

Public opinion is important because both sides in the labor conflict admit that the rank and file of the unions, as well as most of business and industry, urgently want peace.

Against that desire stands the fact that no plan yet advanced to restore harmony has offered a solution for the most ticklish problem involved in the whole situation—the problem of personalities.

Time was when William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., were friends. Three years of battling has made them bitter enemies. Neither would be willing to accept the other as chief of a united labor movement, and no satisfactory third party has been suggested for the job.

Even if a compromise leader could be agreed upon, there would still be the question of jobs for Green and Lewis under the new setup. Lewis could remain as boss of the United Mine Workers, a powerful post he now holds in conjunction with his C. I. O. leadership. But Green was booted out of his original union—The United Mine Workers, from whence he advance to the A. F. of L. presidency—in retaliation for the A. F. of L. suspension of C. I. O. members. He was given a card in the musicians union but no official position.

Lewis has proposed that Green be retired on a pension equal to his present salary. That would be a symbolic defeat for the craft unionism Green represents, for Lewis with his industrial union ideas would remain firmly entrenched while Green would be virtually out of the picture. And this would hardly be approved by the executive council of the A. F. of L., the real A. F. of L. power for which Green is merely the mouthpiece.

That President Roosevelt has some reason for believing the impasse can be resolved is in the back of the minds of those best acquainted with the situation. Otherwise, they think, he would not have risked the political danger involved in calling a meeting and having it fail.

CHANGES SOUGHT IN ALABAMA LAW

Seven Major Amendments Are Proposed By Governor Frank M. Dixon

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 11.—(AP)—Governor Frank M. Dixon, looking back on a successful legislative session that saw enactment of many of his "reorganization and modernization bills, proposed today an ambitious program that embodies drastic changes in Alabama's basic law.

The legislature is scheduled to meet Tuesday in the last day of its session before the mid-term recess, and possibly only one important bill will come up for final action. That is the Sessions bill to appropriate $825,000 to extend school terms.

Obviously satisfied with the way things have turned out, Governor Dixon today outlined proposals which he said would be taken up by a special session, probably to convene Wednesday, and which will require constitutional amendments.

The amendments would provide:

1. That any person may vote after payment of two years' back poll tax.
2. Voting machines in counties desiring them.
3. Biennial instead of quadrennial sessions of the legislature.
4. Reapportionment of the legislature on a population basis.
5. A "modern" pardon and parole system.
6. Permit the investment of trust funds.
7. Authorize circuit judges to act in felony cases, in event of a plea of guilty, without grand jury action.

The governor indicated he expected little opposition to his pardon and parole amendments, and described the proposal to allow probationary sentences by circuit judges as "necessary" to prevent overcrowding of prisons.

A new state board of pardons and paroles would be created, leaving the governor only the power to commute death sentences. The proposed law giving circuit judges additional authority would work hand-in-hand with the new parole system.

A legislative battle is expected, however, on proposed amendments for election reforms and legislative reapportionment.

A bill has been prepared which would reapportion, automatically, the legislature every ten years in accordance with constitutional mandates. It would set up a board of reapportionment, composed of the governor, secretary of state and attorney general.

SERIAL STORY

WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

Susie's heart was breaking, tears stung behind her eyes, a lump in her throat refused to be swallowed. No one looking at Susie, polishing the nickel-plated coffee urn, industriously wiping counters, filling little jugs with syrup, would have credited her with emotions of any sort. Somehow broken hearts and stinging tears were inconsistent with Susie's ponderous homeliness.

Working at her tasks she kept one eye on the door, dully regarding the handsome young men and smartly sophisticated girls who swarmed into the Waffle Shoppe in quest of Susie's golden brown delicacies. Wisecracking, patronizing smoothies, these college students, never treating Susie as a contemporary, never really seeing her.

That is, none of them treated her as a contemporary except Dick Tremaine, and in Dick Tremaine lay the cause of Susie's despairing heart and the lump in her throat. It was for Dick that she watched and waited, whipping egg whites to frothy stiffness, folding them gently into a creamy batter. It was because of Dick that her heart did a sickening flip-flop each time the door opened.

It was the last day of the spring term and excitement pulsed through the Waffle Shoppe, a tenseness, a too gay spirit of comradeship, a subtle denial that this was farewell. By tomorrow the campus would be deserted, trains and cars and airplanes would have carried the beautiful young things away. By tomorrow Dick Tremaine would be gone.

Always Susie had been heart-sick at the end of the spring term, but never like this. Always she had been able to count the days until autumn, always she had known that Dick would come again in the autumn, that he would swing through the door and greet her with his friendliness, bringing back the ache and joy of seeing him.

It was different today. Dick had received his diploma that morning. Susie, sitting far back in the gallery, had seen him walk across the platform and grin as he accepted the sheepskin. Dick's grin—Susie actually shuddered away from the delicious hurt of Dick's grin. A flash of white, an indented line in each of his lean cheeks, a twinkle in his eyes—. For a moment Susie leaned her forehead against the dish cupboard. Must it go on and on? Must she always be tortured by the longing to see Dick, to hear his voice?

Standing there she was suddenly caught by a ray of sunshine from an upper window, spot-lighted in all her drabness. Short and stout, heavy limbs ending in large, flat shoes, a definitely outcurving waistline, thick shoulders, pudgy wrists and hands. Her clumsily solid body was topped by a small, round head, made more round by short, bobbed hair and a limp fringe of bangs across her forehead. She had heavy, beetling brows which came together in a point over a ridiculously small nose. The nose was of the type called snub, tilting upward, the nostrils appearing like two surprised polka dots. Her thinly repressed wide mouth and the frowning brows were constantly contradicted by the silly little nose, the apple round cheeks and chin.

To make matters worse Susie's complexion was definitely on the sallow side, her frequent flush was of a purplish hue. Susie's eyes were long, of all things, and rather nicely lashed.

The ray of sunshine passed on as if in distaste and Susie ladled a huge spoonful of batter to a sizzling waffle iron. She had not always minded being homely. Had she not come to the university town she might have settled into a comfortable, contented niche. It was seeing the young men and girls, having beauty shoved down her throat every day and every day that had embittered her, it was witnessing the joyous fruits of beauty, it was Dick Tremaine and her own frustration.

A co-ed, smart in tailoring and jaunty in appearance, slid onto one of the counter stools, ordered a waffle. Intently, she watched Susie fork a pat of butter, drop it in the exact center of the golden brown dish. Then she asked:

"Where's your boy friend, Susie?" Impudently, she watched the slow flush mount to Susie's cheeks.

Susie said nothing. Once she had been breezy, snappy on the up-take. That was before the quivering heart-strings had tied her tongue. The tears, so close to the surface, crowded upward and she saw the waffle irons through a blur.

She knew the girls laughed behind her back, that they watched her wait on Dick Tremaine, lingering near him while he ate, with secret glee. And the girls knew the shameful story behind it all. They knew, as did Susie, that Dick's casual kindliness had lasted through four years because he was ashamed, sorry for what he had done.

Susie did not encourage her love for Dick, willingly she would have torn it from her heart. No girl, fat and homely and utterly devoid of charm, had any right to love like that. Susie knew it and cried out at the fates who had given her a heart while forgetting the necessary gifts of beauty and allure.

With the passing of the afternoon fear added to the desolation in her heart. Perhaps Dick had gone without a last waffle, without telling her goodby. But that wasn't like Dick. Not once in four years had he missed his afternoon waffle. If he did not come on this, the last day, life would end for Susie.

Not that she expected anything in particular. Just to see him again, that was all. In the back of her mind was a little hope that he might say something, any small thing, that she could carry into the lonely, empty years. Some small thing that would mean nothing to him, but to her so much, so very much.

Stolidly, Susie went on with her baking. Chatter rose and fell around her like the wash of waves, gay little laughs broke across the waves like spray. It was 5 o'clock and Dick had not come. Susie ached with waiting. From habit she kept one eye on the door. That door had become her horizon, beyond it was nothing, through it drifted her pathetic moments of happiness. Only one more moment had she asked, only one—.

The door swung open and Dick was there. Chin up, gay, young—strikingly handsome. A shiver of pain shot through Susie's numbness. She stood still, gobs of batter dripping from her ladle to the waffle iron. Lifting one leg over a stool, Dick sat down. He smiled at Susie. White flash, friendly twinkle—.

Susie closed the waffle iron and moved to the counter. Immediately one of the waitresses took her place. The girls knew what to expect, this had been going on for almost four years.

"Hello, Susie," Dick said cordially. He always said it like that, as if he were glad to see her. Never the patronizing, "Hi, Susie, make it snappy," of the other boys.

"Hello, Dick." Her voice was husky with emotion. He had come. Dick had come to say goodby.

"How's my appetite today?" he asked, the twinkle far back in his eyes.

Susie kept her mouth grim. If she smiled her lips would quiver. Wanting to say something that Dick would remember she floundered stupidly, "I guess you want a waffle."

"Right the first time," he laughed. "Your waffles, Susie—they've got what gets me."

GOVERNOR BAILEY VETOES FIVE BILLS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 11.—(AP)—Governor Carl E. Bailey vetoed today five bills calling for the state highway commission to take over and maintain certain roads in seven counties.

His action presaged death for more than a dozen other similar "pet measures" of legislators which won passage without debate in the closing days of the session. The counties affected by today's vetoes were Cleburne, Van Buren, Lonoke, Pulaski, St. Francis, Benton and Columbia.

Seeking to speed the release of federal allocations for old age pensions and other relief, Bailey called a special meeting of the state welfare commission for Monday. He said the commission would submit to the social security board a new plan, identical to that under which federal aid was obtained during the past two years.

Yesterday the governor signed a bill repealing the controversial act by Senator W. H. Abington of Beebe, which resulted in suspension of federal allocations March 1. The repealer revived the 1937 welfare law.

PEACE IN LABOR UP TO ROOSEVELT

Skilful Maneuvering Will Be Required To Bring Groups Together

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Hope of peace in American labor's three-year civil war was pinned tonight on the personal influence of President Roosevelt.

As armistice conferences between representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations progressed from formal to informal stages over the week-end, neutral observers generally were agreed on one point:

The two embattled groups may be brought together if the president can manage to keep the pressure of public opinion centered on the peace efforts.

If that proves impossible—and it is likely to require skilful maneuvering chances of an agreement are not held promising.

Public opinion is important because both sides in the labor conflict admit that the rank and file of the unions, as well as most of business and industry, urgently want peace.

Against that desire stands the fact that no plan yet advanced to restore harmony has offered a solution for the most ticklish problem involved in the whole situation—the problem of personalities.

Time was when William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., were friends. Three years of battling has made them bitter enemies. Neither would be willing to accept the other as chief of a united labor movement, and no satisfactory third party has been suggested for the job.

Even if a compromise leader could be agreed upon, there would still be the question of jobs for Green and Lewis under the new setup. Lewis could remain as boss of the United Mine Workers, a powerful post he now holds in conjunction with his C. I. O. leadership. But Green was booted out of his original union—The United Mine Workers, from whence he advance to the A. F. of L. presidency—in retaliation for the A. F. of L. suspension of C. I. O. members. He was given a card in the musicians union but no official position.

Lewis has proposed that Green be retired on a pension equal to his present salary. That would be a symbolic defeat for the craft unionism Green represents, for Lewis with his industrial union ideas would remain firmly entrenched while Green would be virtually out of the picture. And this would hardly be approved by the executive council of the A. F. of L., the real A. F. of L. power for which Green is merely the mouthpiece.

That President Roosevelt has some reason for believing the impasse can be resolved is in the back of the minds of those best acquainted with the situation. Otherwise, they think, he would not have risked the political danger involved in calling a meeting and having it fail.

CHANGES SOUGHT IN ALABAMA LAW

Seven Major Amendments Are Proposed By Governor Frank M. Dixon

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 11.—(AP)—Governor Frank M. Dixon, looking back on a successful legislative session that saw enactment of many of his "reorganization and modernization bills, proposed today an ambitious program that embodies drastic changes in Alabama's basic law.

The legislature is scheduled to meet Tuesday in the last day of its session before the mid-term recess, and possibly only one important bill will come up for final action. That is the Sessions bill to appropriate $825,000 to extend school terms.

Obviously satisfied with the way things have turned out, Governor Dixon today outlined proposals which he said would be taken up by a special session, probably to convene Wednesday, and which will require constitutional amendments.

The amendments would provide:

1. That any person may vote after payment of two years' back poll tax.
2. Voting machines in counties desiring them.
3. Biennial instead of quadrennial sessions of the legislature.
4. Reapportionment of the legislature on a population basis.
5. A "modern" pardon and parole system.
6. Permit the investment of trust funds.
7. Authorize circuit judges to act in felony cases, in event of a plea of guilty, without grand jury action.

The governor indicated he expected little opposition to his pardon and parole amendments, and described the proposal to allow probationary sentences by circuit judges as "necessary" to prevent overcrowding of prisons.

A new state board of pardons and paroles would be created, leaving the governor only the power to commute death sentences. The proposed law giving circuit judges additional authority would work hand-in-hand with the new parole system.

A legislative battle is expected, however, on proposed amendments for election reforms and legislative reapportionment.

A bill has been prepared which would reapportion, automatically, the legislature every ten years in accordance with constitutional mandates. It would set up a board of reapportionment, composed of the governor, secretary of state and attorney general.

WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CHAPTER I

Susie's heart was breaking, tears stung behind her eyes, a lump in her throat refused to be swallowed. No one looking at Susie, polishing the nickel-plated coffee urn, industriously wiping counters, filling little jugs with syrup, would have credited her with emotions of any sort. Somehow broken hearts and stinging tears were inconsistent with Susie's ponderous homeliness.

Working at her tasks she kept one eye on the door, dully regarding the handsome young men and smartly sophisticated girls who swarmed into the Waffle Shoppe in quest of Susie's golden brown delicacies. Wisecracking, patronizing smoothies, these college students, never treating Susie as a contemporary, never really seeing her.

It was for Dick that she watched and waited, whipping egg whites to frothy stiffness, folding them gently into a creamy batter. It was because of Dick that her heart did a sickening flip-flop each time the door opened.

It was the last day of the spring term and excitement pulsed through the Waffle Shoppe, a tenseness, a too gay spirit of comradeship, a subtle denial that this was farewell. By tomorrow the campus would be deserted, trains and cars and airplanes would have carried the beautiful young things away. By tomorrow Dick Tremaine would be gone.

Always Susie had been heart-sick at the end of the spring term, but never like this. Always she had been able to count the days until autumn, always she had known that Dick would come again in the autumn, that he would swing through the door and greet her with his friendliness, bringing back the ache and joy of seeing him.

It was different today. Dick had received his diploma that morning. Susie, sitting far back in the gallery, had seen him walk across the platform and grin as he accepted the sheepskin. Dick's grin—Susie actually shuddered away from the delicious hurt of Dick's grin. A flash of white, an indented line in each of his lean cheeks, a twinkle in his eyes—. For a moment Susie leaned her forehead against the dish cupboard. Must it go on and on? Must she always be tortured by the longing to see Dick, to hear his voice?

Standing there she was suddenly caught by a ray of sunshine from an upper window, spot-lighted in all her drabness. Short and stout, heavy limbs ending in large, flat shoes, a definitely outcurving waistline, thick shoulders, pudgy wrists and hands. Her clumsily solid body was topped by a small, round head, made more round by short, bobbed hair and a limp fringe of bangs across her forehead. She had heavy, beetling brows which came together in a point over a ridiculously small nose. The nose was of the type called snub, tilting upward, the nostrils appearing like two surprised polka dots. Her thinly repressed wide mouth and the frowning brows were constantly contradicted by the silly little nose, the apple round cheeks and chin.

To make matters worse Susie's complexion was definitely on the sallow side, her frequent flush was of a purplish hue. Susie's eyes were long, of all things, and rather nicely lashed.

The ray of sunshine passed on as if in distaste and Susie ladled a huge spoonful of batter to a sizzling waffle iron. She had not always minded being homely. Had she not come to the university town she might have settled into a comfortable, contented niche. It was seeing the young men and girls, having beauty shoved down her throat every day and every day that had embittered her, it was witnessing the joyous fruits of beauty, it was Dick Tremaine and her own frustration.

A co-ed, smart in tailoring and jaunty in appearance, slid onto one of the counter stools, ordered a waffle. Intently, she watched Susie fork a pat of butter, drop it in the exact center of the golden brown dish. Then she asked:

"Where's your boy friend, Susie?" Impudently, she watched the slow flush mount to Susie's cheeks.

Susie said nothing. Once she had been breezy, snappy on the up-take. That was before the quivering heart-strings had tied her tongue. The tears, so close to the surface, crowded upward and she saw the waffle irons through a blur.

She knew the girls laughed behind her back, that they watched her wait on Dick Tremaine, lingering near him while he ate, with secret glee. And the girls knew the shameful story behind it all. They knew, as did Susie, that Dick's casual kindliness had lasted through four years because he was ashamed, sorry for what he had done.

Susie did not encourage her love for Dick, willingly she would have torn it from her heart. No girl, fat and homely and utterly devoid of charm, had any right to love like that. Susie knew it and cried out at the fates who had given her a heart while forgetting the necessary gifts of beauty and allure.

With the passing of the afternoon fear added to the desolation in her heart. Perhaps Dick had gone without a last waffle, without telling her goodby. But that wasn't like Dick. Not once in four years had he missed his afternoon waffle. If he did not come on this, the last day, life would end for Susie.

Not that she expected anything in particular. Just to see him again, that was all. In the back of her mind was a little hope that he might say something, any small thing, that she could carry into the lonely, empty years. Some small thing that would mean nothing to him, but to her so much, so very much.

Stolidly, Susie went on with her baking. Chatter rose and fell around her like the wash of waves, gay little laughs broke across the waves like spray. It was 5 o'clock and Dick had not come. Susie ached with waiting. From habit she kept one eye on the door. That door had become her horizon, beyond it was nothing, through it drifted her pathetic moments of happiness. Only one more moment had she asked, only one—.

The door swung open and Dick was there. Chin up, gay, young—strikingly handsome. A shiver of pain shot through Susie's numbness. She stood still, gobs of batter dripping from her ladle to the waffle iron. Lifting one leg over a stool, Dick sat down. He smiled at Susie. White flash, friendly twinkle—.

Susie closed the waffle iron and moved to the counter. Immediately one of the waitresses took her place. The girls knew what to expect, this had been going on for almost four years.

"Hello, Susie," Dick said cordially. He always said it like that, as if he were glad to see her. Never the patronizing, "Hi, Susie, make it snappy," of the other boys.

"Hello, Dick." Her voice was husky with emotion. He had come. Dick had come to say goodby.

"How's my appetite today?" he asked, the twinkle far back in his eyes.

Susie kept her mouth grim. If she smiled her lips would quiver. Wanting to say something that Dick would remember she floundered stupidly, "I guess you want a waffle."

"Right the first time," he laughed. "Your waffles, Susie—they've got what gets me."

WHITE SOX OPEN SPRING TRAINING WEDNESDAY

Sports Chatter

By GEORGE V. LOFTON

MEET MR. RUSSELL

You all know Larry Gilbert. Most of you remember Don McShane, who played in the old park at Forsythe some seven years ago. But perhaps few of you know Fred Russell except by reputation.

Freddie is sports editor of the Nashville Banner and one of the better sports writers of the south. He works for an excellent newspaper whose publisher, James G. Stahlman, is president of the American Newspaper Publishers association.

Fred began singing Monroe's praises the first day he spent in camp. He was agreeably surprised, and said so. We though perhaps Freddie was just being nice in the presence of the "natives" but in Tuesday's edition of the Banner he proved he meant every word of it. His entire column, Sideline Sidelights, was devoted to a description and history of Monroe.

This column, incidentally, should be an eye-opener to those short-sighted individuals who can't see the advantage of paying a relatively small amount of money to bring a baseball club here for spring training. As we've pointed out time and again, it's an investment that's returned many times over. It gives Monroe the kind of publicity that money can't buy.

But to get back to Freddie's description of Monroe. From here on out the column is his, just as it appeared in Tuesday's Banner:

THE CITY OF MONROE

"MONROE, La., March 11.—After four springs spent in the tranquility of Tallahassee, the Vols have shifted to this industrial center of north Louisiana to prepare for another baseball campaign.

For Manager Larry Gilbert, it is more of an adventure than you may think. Never before has he carried a club away for spring conditioning. He has always trained right there in his own ball park at New Orleans, dressing out of the same old locker, eating home cooking and taking everything in stride.

"For Owner Fay Murray, it is admittedly a gamble, this shift to Monroe. At Tallahassee, the weather was ideal and the park and training facilities were near-perfect. Hotel accommodations and food were highly satisfactory. The only objection was that the Vols, training in north Florida, could get very few exhibition games.

"Good exhibition games are desirable for two reasons: (1) There is no better way to find out the ability of youngsters than by playing them; (2) the money from the exhibitions helps in defraying the enormous expense of spring training.

"So the Vols are here, exploring new territory, hoping first for good weather and good food, and after that, large audiences of cash customers.

22,500 INHABITANTS

"After one day here, one is impressed with Monroe's bustle. And I mean nothing there, Mrs. Quackenbush.

"It is a city of 32,500, situated exactly 264 miles south of Memphis and 491 miles from Nashville on the banks of the beautiful Ouachita river. The river separates Monroe and West Monroe, two separate municipalities. The

YANKEES BLAST CARDINALS, 6-4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—With Rookie Warren Rosar hitting a home run, the New York Yankee siege guns blasted the St. Louis Cardinals 6 to 4 today in the first of their games for the training camp championship of St. Petersburg.

The world champions offered a piecework lineup which included only three regulars of last year but took a three run lead in the first two innings and coasted to the finish.

Score by innings:

New York (A)	.120	100	110	—	6	14	2
St. Louis (N)	.002	100	010	—	4	8	1

55 CAGE TEAMS REHEARSE PLAYS FOR TOURNAMENT

World Series Of Basketball To Be In Progress For Entire Week

DENVER, March 11.—(AP)—Fifty-five teams rehearsed their pet plays tonight for basketball's week-long "world series," which will close with the crowning of the 1939 National A. A. U. champion next Saturday night.

The field, the largest in the five years the biggest show in cagedom has been held in mile high Denver, with teams representing 27 states, will begin play tomorrow.

A schedule of 39 games, involving 1,560 minutes of actual playing time, must be run off in the next three days to trim the entry list to the round of 16 by Wednesday.

This is the 33rd national tournament since the Knickerbocker Athletic club of New York won the first championship back in 1899, just eight years after Dr. James Naismith nailed up a couple of peach baskets and gave the world a new game.

The A. A. U. meet, as democratic a sports test as the nation offers, brings together teams from every class of basketball society—small college quintets such as Doane college of Nebraska and Phillips of Oklahoma; club teams such as the Goodfellows of Gary, Ind., and such powerful A. A. U. quintets as the Denver Nuggets, champions of the high-powered Missouri Valley A. A. U. league this season.

The Nuggets, unbeaten this season on the spacious city auditorium court where the tournament battles will be fought, are the top favorites for the championship.

Observers noted the pairings did nothing to harm the local team's chances. If all goes well with them, the Nuggets will clash with the Chicago Harmons in the semi-finals, while the Bartlesville, Okla., Phillips and the Oklahoma City Parks, the Denverites' lusty rivals from the Missouri Valley circuit, must battle each other in the other semi-final, providing they get that far.

Only 11 college teams are entered—all small schools from the midwest, southwest and Rocky Mountains sections. No team from the nation's big intercollegiate conferences has competed in the meet in years.

Seven sections of the nation have entered teams, the mountain district leading with 15. The midwestern sector has sent 13, the southwest nine, Pacific coast six, the east five, the south four and the northern section three.

The Gaylords of Bogalusa, La., will meet the Colorado Springs Speedways in a first-round game tomorrow morning.

BROOKLYN BEATS CINCINNATI, 8-6

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers belted Cincinnati pitching for two home runs to beat the Reds 8 to 6 today in the season's first exhibition game for both teams. Johnny Hudson hit a homer with the bases filled in the first inning to start Brooklyn off to a 5-0 lead. Fred Sington hit another off Lee Grissom in the third.

Score by innings:

Cincinnati (N)	.001	030	002	—	6	10	1
Brooklyn (N)	.501	000	11x	—	8	9	1

COACH TAKES NEW JOB

TRAINING CAMP Notes

PIRATES

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—Captain and First Baseman Gus Suhr today signed a contract for his tenth season with the Pittsburgh Pirates, reducing the Buc 1939 holdout list to Outfielder Paul Waner. Suhr was reported to have accepted a salary in the neighborhood of $8,000, less than $1,000 under his last year's pay.

TIGERS

LAKELAND, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Fred Hutchinson, high-priced rookie, will make his debut as a Detroit Tiger pitcher in an intra-squad game here Sunday, Manager Del Baker announced today. Opposing the 19-year-old right hander will be Vernon Kennedy, Tiger veteran. Tommy Bridges and Archie McKain will work the last three innings.

PHILLIES

BROWNS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 11.—(AP)—Pitchers Bill Trotter, Emil Bildilli and Harry Kimberlin, who won 56 games among them in the minor leagues last season, will work for the St. Louis Browns in their exhibition game with the Phillies here tomorrow.

Bildilli won 18 games for Springfield, Ill., of the Three-I league, and Trotter and Kimberlin, both with San Antonio of the Texas league, won 22 and 16, respectively.

WHITE SOX

PASADENA, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—Rookie Chicago White Sox pitchers will get a chance to show their stuff tomorrow in the team's initial exhibition game against a Pasadena semi-pro nine.

Manager Jimmy Dykes has assigned hurling chores to Jess Dobernic, Tom Fleming and Jim Scott. Jr. Aside from pitching, regulars will compose the White Sox lineup.

CUBS

AVALON, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—The fine showing of Hank Leiber and Jim Gleeson has simplified outfield worries of Chicago Cubs' Manager Gabby Hartnett.

Leiber is looking great afield and at bat. Gleeson has speed and plate power Hartnett has been looking for. If they continue their impressive work, it appears certain they and Augie Galan will be the outfield when the season starts.

BEES

BRADENTON, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Deacon Dan MacFayden and Jimmy Turner each allowed one run today as the Bees regulars defeated the yannigans, 9 to 2, in a seven-inning game. Each also gave only one hit, MacFayden in three and Turner in four innings. Lou Fette and Lief Errickson were on the mound for the yannigans, the regulars getting three hits off Fette in three innings and 11 off Errickson.

RED SOX

CLEVELAND DEFEATS JERSEY CITY, 12-10

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians, with scattered regulars in the lineup, hammered out 13 hits today to defeat Jersey City of the International league in the Tribe's second exhibition game of the season, 12 to 10.

The Tribe scored two runs off John Hubbell, right-handed brother of the New York Giants' Carl, in the first inning.

Score by innings:

Jersey City (IL)	.001	030	006	—	10	11	2
Cleveland (A)	.200	301	24x	—	12	13	2

REBEL, MAROON BOXERS MEET MONDAY IN JACKSON

UNIVERSITY, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—The Ole Miss and Mississippi State boxers meet Monday night at Jackson in a post-season match.

Highlight of the evening's battles will be the contest between Ole Miss' Ray Medlock and Punchy Davis, who recently won the Southeastern conference lightweight championship for State.

Davis trimmed Medlock twice this year while the Ole Miss battler decisioned Davis once.

Steve Wilkerson will probably meet Russell Long of the Maroons in the senior welter class, while Eliam B. Burns of the Rebels will take on Jack Nox for the light heavyweight decision.

WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

TROJANS, RAMS CONTENDERS FOR TIGERS' CROWN

Preliminaries Scheduled Friday Night; Title Bouts Saturday Night

Coach Percy Brown of Neville High school announced last night that 143 entries had been received from ten schools for participation in the sixth annual district boxing tournament to be held at the Neville auditorium Friday and Saturday.

Ninety-one of the entries are first choice fighters and 52 are alternates, Coach Brown said. Schools represented are Neville, Bastrop, Tallulah, Lake Providence, Oak Grove, Pioneer, Start, Delhi, Grayson and Clarks.

Tallulah and Bastrop are regarded as unusually strong contenders against Neville, which now holds the championship. The Tallulah battlers are champions of the Delta district tournament.

Weighing in of the boys will take place at the Neville gymnasium Friday from 1 to 2:30 p.m., and the drawing and bracketing will follow immediately, Coach Brown said.

The preliminaries will begin Friday at 8 p.m. and the semi-finals will be fought Saturday at 2 p.m. The consolation and championship battles will be staged Saturday at 8 p.m.

KALLIO ARRANGES WRESTLING CARD

Two Light Heavyweight Matches Scheduled Here Wednesday Night

Wrestling will be revived here Wednesday night at the Monroe Wrestling Arena, located at 310 Walnut street, under the promotion of Gus Kallio of Arcadia, former middleweight champion of the world.

Kallio, who is recuperating from an arm injury received when he lost his title in January in Mexico City, has arranged two light heavyweight matches as a curtain raiser. Professor Higami of Japan will meet Carl Promburg of Germany in the main event and Ned Taylor of Seattle will tangle with Bob Castle of Memphis in the semi-final.

The main tussle will have a time limit of 90 minutes, with two falls being required to win. The semi-final will require only one fall for victory, but will be limited to an hour.

The door of the arena, which shares the building at 310 Walnut street with a skating rink, will open at 7:15. The wrestlers will start their activities an hour later.

The matches will be refereed by Jimmy Mallory of Shreveport, a wrestler with considerable experience as the third man on the mat.

Promoter Kallio said he is personally acquainted with Higami and Taylor and that he knows them to be fast, capable grapplers. Promburg and Castle are of the same caliber, Kallio said he had been informed.

BUDGE BEATS PERRY AGAIN

Don Races Through Fred In Straight Sets For Second Successive Night

BOSTON, March 11.—(AP)—Peerless Don Budge tonight raced through Fred Perry, former British Davis cup ace, in straight sets for the second night in succession, taking the second match of their cross-country professional tour 6-0, 6-2, 8-6.

A paid Boston Garden crowd of 3,753—held down in size by a New England snowstorm—saw Budge pick up where he left off in New York last night, and easily take nine straight games.

At this point Perry, loser of 18 straight games, including the last nine he dropped in Madison Square Garden last night, took a firm stand, apparently irked by a taunt from the gallery.

"Say, are you interested in golf, too?" someone yelled to the Britisher, apparently referring to the reason given for Ellsworth Vines' poor showing in his series of matches with Budge.

"No," snapped back the Briton, turning red, "are you?"

BLIND WRESTLER WINS AWARD AT PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—(AP)—A youth who overcame the handicap of blindness to become captain of the University of Pennsylvania's wrestling team was presented an award tonight as the "member of the senior class who most closely approaches the ideal University of Pennsylvania athlete."

The award, established by the class of 1915, is given each year on the basis of character, personality, scholastic standing and athletic ability.

Robert George Allman of Philadelphia, who has been blind since he was five years old, wrestles as an 118-pounder.

MacPhail Asks Scribes How They'd Run Brooklyn Club

While Interview Goes On, Durocher Strives To Develop Strategy

By Gayle Talbot

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—I dropped in on the Brooklyn Dodgers and was not particularly surprised to find General Manager Larry MacPhail interviewing the members of the press in a body. I mean seriously.

It is, of course, customary on practically all other ball clubs for the sports writers to interview the team officials, but neither MacPhail nor any of his merry men ever has bothered much about the accepted rules.

Larry had gathered all the scribes from their beds and off the golf courses to ask them, for instance, if they had any hot ideas about how the club ought to be run.

He got no very bright suggestions out of the hour's session, and some of the boys complained they had been taken in, having attended the conference under the impression they were going to interview MacPhail. He said no, that he didn't know any news and thanked the group for trying to answer his questions.

While this left-handed interview was going on, Leo Durocher, the team's new playing manager, was out there putting his athletes through a complicated fielding drill, designed to develop strategy.

"All right," he yelled as he prepared to knock an infield roller. "We're two runs ahead, there's one out and they have a man on third."

"Nuts," bellowed a delighted fan. "You never was two runs ahead in your lives!"

He'd probably been out every day waiting for that opportunity, and he got a nice hand from the stands. The opposition runner on third scored incidentally.

Old Dazzy Vance, for many a year the greatest pitcher Brooklyn possessed, was sunning himself on the clubhouse veranda and looking very thin and shaky. He is slowly recovering from a terrible spell of pneumonia and resultant complications that caused them to despair of his life several times this winter. He has lost about 50 pounds.

The Dodgers wound up seventh last year, beating out the Phillies after a desperate scramble in the stretch.

The team still lacks real class in its mound staff, as is reflected in the fact that Freddie Fitzsimmons, who will be an even 38 in July, is counted upon as a starting pitcher, and that Van Lingle Mungo still is about the most "promising man" on the staff. He won four and lost 11 last season.

There will be only one change in the infield, Pete Coscarart, a .315 hitter from Nashville taking over second base. Dolph Camilli remains the best fielding first baseman in the game, and Durocher still is lots of shortstop. Cookie Lavagetto will hold down third again.

BASTROP DEFEATS OUACHITA NETMEN

Rams Victorious Over Lions By Score Of Seven Matches To Three

BASTROP, La., March 11.—(Special)—The Bastrop High school Rams butted Ouachita High's netmen around at will today, winning by a score of seven matches to three. The Rams took five of the seven singles and two of the three doubles tilts.

Nelson Abell and Hugh Hackley won the two singles battles for Ouachita and teamed up to win the only doubles match captured by the Lions.

Abell defeated James Adams, 6-4, 6-2. After dropping the first set to Bobby Aubrey, Hackley rallied to win, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Abell and Hackley faced the same two Rams in the doubles, which the former captured, 6-2, 10-12, 6-0.

Other results, with the Bastrop players listed first:

Singles—Woodrow Wilson defeated Bill McDowell, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4; Velton Williams bested Robert Wood, 6-2, 6-1; James Pate beat Wharton Brown, 6-3, 6-4; James Malson overcame C. Pearce, 6-1, 6-1; Harold Daniels downed Bill Funke, 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles—Wilson and Williams won over McDowell and Wood, 8-6, 6-4; Pate and Malson defeated Pearce and Brown, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Bastrop will meet the Lions in return matches next Saturday on the Northeast Center of L. S. U. courts in Monroe. The Rams will endeavor to send a few girl racquet wielders to these matches. Coach George Riser of Ouachita said he was anxious to arrange games for his girl performers.

ATHLETICS SWAMPED BY GIANTS, 15 TO 2

LAKE CHARLES, La., March 11.—(AP)—If it was power Bill Terry wanted in his New York Giants this year, the 15 to 2 walloping the club gave the Philadelphia Athletics in the first exhibition game today must have been pretty satisfactory.

Big Zeke Bonura smacked the first pitch over the fence to score three runners ahead. Next time up he hit a triple.

MILER, RUNNING TEMPERATURE, LOSES 2 RACES

Glenn Cunningham Second In 1,000 And Fourth In Mile Race

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, beaten only once in 11 previous races this season, was whipped in both his starts tonight, as long John Borican ran the fastest 1,000 yards on record to beat him by two yards in this special and the Kansan then ran last in the Columbian mile at the Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden.

Showing little interest in extending a winning streak that had run through the last six mile races in this meet, Cunningham astonished the crowd of 15,000 by running a lifeless race. He was a full 40 yards back as Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin broke the tape in 4 minutes 11.1 seconds, seven yards in front of Gene Venzke, with Archie San Romani third.

Cunningham, who started in the outside lane, never moved out of last place. With Fenske and Venzke alternately holding the lead, the 29-year-old veteran from Peabody, Kas., stuck to San Romani's heels. He made one minor challenge trying to overhaul San Romani in his favorite spot, the last backstretch, but even that wasn't good enough to bring him by the New York U. graduate student.

Cunningham revealed after the mile that he had had a temperature of 101 before the start of the 1,000, and that it was still at 99 when he toed the mark for the mile. Glenn said he had suffered an attack of influenza this week, and in addition had driven 2,500 miles as part of his job in the extension division of Kansas university.

The sturdy Kansan, usually a picture of health and always a man who keeps himself in tip-top condition, looked drawn and haggard. In view of the circumstances, it was a remarkable effort on his part to start in either race and virtually a superhuman feat to give Borican the battle he did in the shorter of their two clashes.

Borican's record breaking performance was clouded by the refusal of Starter Johnny McHugh to sign the affidavit. McHugh claimed Borican beat the gun. His signature is required before the new standard can go on the books.

Nor was the negro ace's triumph entirely satisfactory to the crowd that turned out for this final meet of the Garden season, lured by the prospect of seeing both Borican and Cunningham try for a double. For Borican, who started on the pole and streaked in to lead at the gun, ran a front race all the way and carried Cunningham out into the middle of the track down the last two straightaways.

New record or not, Borican's time

Regulars And Rookies To Report; Nashville Vets Due In Tomorrow

The town will be overrun by baseball players, come next Wednesday. Nashville's Volunteers, some 25 strong, have been cavorting at Casino park for the past week. The squad consisted mostly of pitchers, catchers and rookies, but Monday is the deadline for Manager Larry Gilbert's regulars to report for conditioning exercises. Then on Wednesday the Monroe squad will officially open spring training and the number of diamond performers should reach well into the seventies by that time.

VOLS TO WORK TODAY

Manager Larry Gilbert of the Nashville Vols announced yesterday that his squad would take a short workout today, starting at 12:30 o'clock, provided the weather is okay.

"We hadn't planned a Sunday workout but a number of fans who can't get out during the week asked that we go through our paces tomorrow," the popular skipper said yesterday. "It will not be as long as usual, but we're glad to schedule a workout for the baseball enthusiasts who want to watch us."

The Vols will resume the usual drill Monday.

Manager Doug Taitt's champions and candidates for jobs in 1939 are all expected to be present or accounted for by Wednesday, when the White Sox will take their first workout as a group. Taitt and several of his hirelings have been working with the Vols for the past week but with the increase to almost normal strength, numerically, the squad will be on its own the latter part of the week.

Taitt, John Yelovic and Frank Hackney are the regulars who started with the Vols last Monday. Murrell Jones, the clouting rookie who aspires to the first basing job with the Sox this season, and Ed Stroud and George Taitt, fledglings who hope to catch on as members of the Monroe mound corps, also have been present during the past six workouts.

Hank Taylor, who's expected to be the Sox first string catcher this season, checked in last night and others are slated to drift into camp between now and Wednesday. Johnny Conway, shortstop and sparkplug of the championship combination last season, has been expected since last Wednesday but so far he hasn't shown up. Johnny wrote friends that he would be here "about the 8th or 9th."

Three rookies Taitt signed up in Nashville last winter are among the contingent expected before Wednesday. The squad includes, other than those already mentioned, Pitchers "Red" Andrews, "Tex" Nugent, and Frank Narbut; Guy "Red" Pruitt,

FOOT ITCH
ATHLETE'S FOOT
Relief Guaranteed Or Your Money Back

According to the Government Health Bulletin No. E-28, at least 50% of the adult population of the United States are being attacked by the disease known as Athlete's Foot.

Usually the disease starts between the toes. Little watery blisters form, and the skin cracks and peels. After a while, the itching becomes intense, and you feel as though you would like to scratch off all the skin.

Beware of It Spreading

Often the disease travels all over the bottom of the foot. The soles of your feet become red and swollen. The skin also cracks and peels, and the itching becomes worse and worse.

Get relief from this disease as quickly as possible, because it is very contagious, and it may go to your hands or even to the under arm or crotch of the legs.

Most people who have Athlete's Foot have tried all kinds of remedies to relieve it without success. Ordinary germicides, antiseptics, salves or ointments seldom do any good.

Here's How to Relieve It

The germ that causes the disease is known as Tinea Trichophyton. It buries itself deep in the tissues of the skin and is very hard to kill. A test made shows it takes 15 minutes of boiling to kill the germ; so you can see why the ordinary remedies are unsuccessful.

H. F. was developed solely for the purpose of relieving Athlete's Foot. It is a liquid that penetrates and dries quickly. You just paint the affected parts. It peels off the tissue of the skin where the germ breeds.

Itching Stops Quickly

As soon as you apply H. F. you may find that the itching is quickly relieved. You should paint the infected parts with H. F. night and morning until your feet are well. Usually this takes from three to ten days, although in severe cases it may take longer or in mild cases less time.

H. F. will leave the skin soft and smooth. You will marvel at the quick way it brings you relief; especially if you are one of those who have tried for years to get relief from Athlete's Foot without success.

Sports Chatter

By GEORGE V. LOFTON

MEET MR. RUSSELL

You all know Larry Gilbert. Most of you remember Don McShane, who played in the old park at Forsythe some seven years ago. But perhaps few of you know Fred Russell except by reputation.

Freddie is sports editor of the Nashville Banner and one of the better sports writers of the south. He works for an excellent newspaper whose publisher, James G. Stahlman, is president of the American Newspaper Publishers association.

Fred began singing Monroe's praises the first day he spent in camp. He was agreeably surprised, and said so. We though perhaps Freddie was just being nice in the presence of the "natives" but in Tuesday's edition of the Banner he proved he meant every word of it. His entire column, Sideline Sidelights, was devoted to a description and history of Monroe.

This column, incidentally, should be an eye-opener to those short-sighted individuals who can't see the advantage of paying a relatively small amount of money to bring a baseball club here for spring training. As we've pointed out time and again, it's an investment that's returned many times over. It gives Monroe the kind of publicity that money can't buy.

But to get back to Freddie's description of Monroe. From here on out the column is his, just as it appeared in Tuesday's Banner:

THE CITY OF MONROE

"MONROE, La., March 11.—After four springs spent in the tranquility of Tallahassee, the Vols have shifted to this industrial center of north Louisiana to prepare for another baseball campaign.

For Manager Larry Gilbert, it is more of an adventure than you may think. Never before has he carried a club away for spring conditioning. He has always trained right there in his own ball park at New Orleans, dressing out of the same old locker, eating home cooking and taking everything in stride.

"For Owner Fay Murray, it is admittedly a gamble, this shift to Monroe. At Tallahassee, the weather was ideal and the park and training facilities were near-perfect. Hotel accommodations and food were highly satisfactory. The only objection was that the Vols, training in north Florida, could get very few exhibition games.

"Good exhibition games are desirable for two reasons: (1) There is no better way to find out the ability of youngsters than by playing them; (2) the money from the exhibitions helps in defraying the enormous expense of spring training.

"So the Vols are here, exploring new territory, hoping first for good weather and good food, and after that, large audiences of cash customers.

"After one day here, one is impressed with Monroe's bustle. And I mean nothing there, Mrs. Quackenbush.

"It is a city of 32,500, situated exactly 264 miles south of Memphis and 491 miles from Nashville on the banks of the beautiful Ouachita river. The river separates Monroe and West Monroe, two separate municipalities. The

YANKEES BLAST CARDINALS, 6-4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—With Rookie Warren Rosar hitting a home run, the New York Yankee siege guns blasted the St. Louis Cardinals 6 to 4 today in the first of their games for the training camp championship of St. Petersburg.

The world champions offered a piecework lineup which included only three regulars of last year but took a three run lead in the first two innings and coasted to the finish.

55 CAGE TEAMS REHEARSE PLAYS FOR TOURNAMENT

World Series Of Basketball To Be In Progress For Entire Week

DENVER, March 11.—(AP)—Fifty-five teams rehearsed their pet plays tonight for basketball's week-long "world series," which will close with the crowning of the 1939 National A. A. U. champion next Saturday night.

The field, the largest in the five years the biggest show in cagedom has been held in mile high Denver, with teams representing 27 states, will begin play tomorrow.

A schedule of 39 games, involving 1,560 minutes of actual playing time, must be run off in the next three days to trim the entry list to the round of 16 by Wednesday.

This is the 33rd national tournament since the Knickerbocker Athletic club of New York won the first championship back in 1899, just eight years after Dr. James Naismith nailed up a couple of peach baskets and gave the world a new game.

The A. A. U. meet, as democratic a sports test as the nation offers, brings together teams from every class of basketball society—small college quintets such as Doane college of Nebraska and Phillips of Oklahoma; club teams such as the Goodfellows of Gary, Ind., and such powerful A. A. U. quintets as the Denver Nuggets, champions of the high-powered Missouri Valley A. A. U. league this season.

The Nuggets, unbeaten this season on the spacious city auditorium court where the tournament battles will be fought, are the top favorites for the championship.

Observers noted the pairings did nothing to harm the local team's chances. If all goes well with them, the Nuggets will clash with the Chicago Harmons in the semi-finals, while the Bartlesville, Okla., Phillips and the Oklahoma City Parks, the Denverites' lusty rivals from the Missouri Valley circuit, must battle each other in the other semi-final, providing they get that far.

Only 11 college teams are entered—all small schools from the midwest, southwest and Rocky Mountains sections. No team from the nation's big intercollegiate conferences has competed in the meet in years.

Seven sections of the nation have entered teams, the mountain district leading with 15. The midwestern sector has sent 13, the southwest nine, Pacific coast six, the east five, the south four and the northern section three.

The Gaylords of Bogalusa, La., will meet the Colorado Springs Speedways in a first-round game tomorrow morning.

BROOKLYN BEATS CINCINNATI, 8-6

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers belted Cincinnati pitching for two home runs to beat the Reds 8 to 6 today in the season's first exhibition game for both teams. Johnny Hudson hit a homer with the bases filled in the first inning to start Brooklyn off to a 5-0 lead. Fred Sington hit another off Lee Grissom in the third.

Score by innings:

Cincinnati (N)....001 030 002— 6 10 1
Brooklyn (N) ....501 000 11x— 8 9 1

COACH TAKES NEW JOB

PIRATES

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—Captain and First Baseman Gus Suhr today signed a contract for his tenth season with the Pittsburgh Pirates, reducing the Buc 1939 holdout list to Outfielder Paul Waner. Suhr was reported to have accepted a salary in the neighborhood of $8,000, less than $1,000 under his last year's pay.

TIGERS

LAKELAND, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Fred Hutchinson, high-priced rookie, will make his debut as a Detroit Tiger pitcher in an intra-squad game here Sunday, Manager Del Baker announced today. Opposing the 19-year-old right hander will be Vernon Kennedy, Tiger veteran. Tommy Bridges and Archie McKain will work the last three innings.

PHILLIES

BROWNS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 11.—(AP)—Pitchers Bill Trotter, Emil Bildilli and Harry Kimberlin, who won 56 games among them in the minor leagues last season, will work for the St. Louis Browns in their exhibition game with the Phillies here tomorrow.

Bildilli won 18 games for Springfield, Ill., of the Three-I league, and Trotter and Kimberlin, both with San Antonio of the Texas league, won 22 and 16, respectively.

WHITE SOX

PASADENA, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—Rookie Chicago White Sox pitchers will get a chance to show their stuff tomorrow in the team's initial exhibition game against a Pasadena semi-pro nine.

Manager Jimmy Dykes has assigned hurling chores to Jess Dobernic, Tom Fleming and Jim Scott. Jr. Aside from pitching, regulars will compose the White Sox lineup.

CUBS

AVALON, Calif., March 11.—(AP)—The fine showing of Hank Leiber and Jim Gleeson has simplified outfield worries of Chicago Cubs' Manager Gabby Hartnett.

Leiber is looking great afield and at bat. Gleeson has speed and plate power Hartnett has been looking for. If they continue their impressive work, it appears certain they and Augie Galan will be the outfield when the season starts.

BEES

BRADENTON, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Deacon Dan MacFayden and Jimmy Turner each allowed one run today as the Bees regulars defeated the yannigans, 9 to 2, in a seven-inning game. Each also gave only one hit, MacFayden in three and Turner in four innings. Lou Fette and Lief Errickson were on the mound for the yannigans, the regulars getting three hits off Fette in three innings and 11 off Errickson.

RED SOX

CLEVELAND DEFEATS JERSEY CITY, 12-10

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians, with scattered regulars in the lineup, hammered out 13 hits today to defeat Jersey City of the International league in the Tribe's second exhibition game of the season, 12 to 10.

The Tribe scored two runs off John Hubbell, right-handed brother of the New York Giants' Carl, in the first inning.

Score by innings:

Cleveland (A) .....200 301 24x—12 13 2

Cleveland—Drake, Zuber, Smith and Hemsley, Hegan; Jersey City—Hubbell, Meketi, Watkins and Toncoff, Sheehan.

REBEL, MAROON BOXERS MEET MONDAY IN JACKSON

UNIVERSITY, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—The Ole Miss and Mississippi State boxers meet Monday night at Jackson in a post-season match.

Highlight of the evening's battles will be the contest between Ole Miss' Ray Medlock and Punchy Davis, who recently won the Southeastern conference lightweight championship for State.

Davis trimmed Medlock twice this year while the Ole Miss battler decisioned Davis once.

Steve Wilkerson will probably meet Russell Long of the Maroons in the senior welter class, while Eliam B. Burns of the Rebels will take on Jack Nox for the light heavyweight decision.

WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

TROJANS, RAMS CONTENDERS FOR TIGERS' CROWN

Preliminaries Scheduled Friday Night; Title Bouts Saturday Night

Coach Percy Brown of Neville High school announced last night that 143 entries had been received from ten schools for participation in the sixth annual district boxing tournament to be held at the Neville auditorium Friday and Saturday.

Ninety-one of the entries are first choice fighters and 52 are alternates, Coach Brown said. Schools represented are Neville, Bastrop, Tallulah, Lake Providence, Oak Grove, Pioneer, Start, Delhi, Grayson and Clarks.

Tallulah and Bastrop are regarded as unusually strong contenders against Neville, which now holds the championship. The Tallulah battlers are champions of the Delta district tournament.

Weighing in of the boys will take place at the Neville gymnasium Friday from 1 to 2:30 p.m., and the drawing and bracketing will follow immediately, Coach Brown said.

The preliminaries will begin Friday at 8 p.m. and the semi-finals will be fought Saturday at 2 p.m. The consolation and championship battles will be staged Saturday at 8 p.m.

KALLIO ARRANGES WRESTLING CARD

Two Light Heavyweight Matches Scheduled Here Wednesday Night

Wrestling will be revived here Wednesday night at the Monroe Wrestling Arena, located at 310 Walnut street, under the promotion of Gus Kallio of Arcadia, former middleweight champion of the world.

Kallio, who is recuperating from an arm injury received when he lost his title in January in Mexico City, has arranged two light heavyweight matches as a curtain raiser. Professor Higami of Japan will meet Carl Promburg of Germany in the main event and Ned Taylor of Seattle will tangle with Bob Castle of Memphis in the semi-final.

The main tussle will have a time limit of 90 minutes, with two falls being required to win. The semi-final will require only one fall for victory, but will be limited to an hour.

The door of the arena, which shares the building at 310 Walnut street with a skating rink, will open at 7:15. The wrestlers will start their activities an hour later.

The matches will be refereed by Jimmy Mallory of Shreveport, a wrestler with considerable experience as the third man on the mat.

Promoter Kallio said he is personally acquainted with Higami and Taylor and that he knows them to be fast, capable grapplers. Promburg and Castle are of the same caliber, Kallio said he had been informed.

BUDGE BEATS PERRY AGAIN

Don Races Through Fred In Straight Sets For Second Successive Night

BOSTON, March 11.—(AP)—Peerless Don Budge tonight raced through Fred Perry, former British Davis cup ace, in straight sets for the second night in succession, taking the second match of their cross-country professional tour 6-0, 6-2, 8-6.

A paid Boston Garden crowd of 3,753—held down in size by a New England snowstorm—saw Budge pick up where he left off in New York last night, and easily take nine straight games.

At this point Perry, loser of 18 straight games, including the last nine he dropped in Madison Square Garden last night, took a firm stand, apparently irked by a taunt from the gallery.

"Say, are you interested in golf, too?" someone yelled to the Britisher, apparently referring to the reason given for Ellsworth Vines' poor showing in his series of matches with Budge.

"No," snapped back the Briton, turning red, "are you?"

BLIND WRESTLER WINS AWARD AT PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—(AP)—A youth who overcame the handicap of blindness to become captain of the University of Pennsylvania's wrestling team was presented an award tonight as the "member of the senior class who most closely approaches the ideal University of Pennsylvania athlete."

The award, established by the class of 1915, is given each year on the basis of character, personality, scholastic standing and athletic ability.

Robert George Allman of Philadelphia, who has been blind since he was five years old, wrestles as an 118-pounder.

MacPhail Asks Scribes How They'd Run Brooklyn Club

While Interview Goes On, Durocher Strives To Develop Strategy

By Gayle Talbot

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—I dropped in on the Brooklyn Dodgers and was not particularly surprised to find General Manager Larry MacPhail interviewing the members of the press in a body. I mean seriously.

It is, of course, customary on practically all other ball clubs for the sports writers to interview the team officials, but neither MacPhail nor any of his merry men ever has bothered much about the accepted rules.

Larry had gathered all the scribes from their beds and off the golf courses to ask them, for instance, if they had any hot ideas about how the club ought to be run.

He got no very bright suggestions out of the hour's session, and some of the boys complained they had been taken in, having attended the conference under the impression they were going to interview MacPhail. He said no, that he didn't know any news and thanked the group for trying to answer his questions.

While this left-handed interview was going on, Leo Durocher, the team's new playing manager, was out there putting his athletes through a complicated fielding drill, designed to develop strategy.

"All right," he yelled as he prepared to knock an infield roller. "We're two runs ahead, there's one out and they have a man on third."

"Nuts," bellowed a delighted fan. "You never was two runs ahead in your lives!"

He'd probably been out every day waiting for that opportunity, and he got a nice hand from the stands. The opposition runner on third scored incidentally.

Old Dazzy Vance, for many a year the greatest pitcher Brooklyn possessed, was sunning himself on the clubhouse veranda and looking very thin and shaky. He is slowly recovering from a terrible spell of pneumonia and resultant complications that caused them to despair of his life several times this winter. He has lost about 50 pounds.

The Dodgers wound up seventh last year, beating out the Phillies after a desperate scramble in the stretch.

The team still lacks real class in its mound staff, as is reflected in the fact that Freddie Fitzsimmons, who will be an even 38 in July, is counted upon as a starting pitcher, and that Van Lingle Mungo still is about the most "promising man" on the staff. He won four and lost 11 last season.

There will be only one change in the infield, Pete Coscarart, a .315 hitter from Nashville taking over second base. Dolph Camilli remains the best fielding first baseman in the game, and Durocher still is lots of shortstop. Cookie Lavagetto will hold down third again.

Rams Victorious Over Lions By Score Of Seven Matches To Three

BASTROP, La., March 11.—(Special)—The Bastrop High school Rams butted Ouachita High's netmen around at will today, winning by a score of seven matches to three. The Rams took five of the seven singles and two of the three doubles tilts.

Nelson Abell and Hugh Hackley won the two singles battles for Ouachita and teamed up to win the only doubles match captured by the Lions.

Abell defeated James Adams, 6-4, 6-2. After dropping the first set to Bobby Aubrey, Hackley rallied to win, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Abell and Hackley faced the same two Rams in the doubles, which the former captured, 6-2, 10-12, 6-0.

Other results, with the Bastrop players listed first:

Singles—Woodrow Wilson defeated Bill McDowell, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4; Velton Williams bested Robert Wood, 6-2, 6-1; James Pate beat Wharton Brown, 6-3, 6-4; James Malson overcame C. Pearce, 6-1, 6-1; Harold Doniels downed Bill Funke, 6-1, 6-1.

Doubles—Wilson and Williams won over McDowell and Wood, 8-6, 6-4; Pate and Malson defeated Pearce and Brown, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Bastrop will meet the Lions in return matches next Saturday on the Northeast Center of L. S. U. courts in Monroe. The Rams will endeavor to send a few girl racquet wielders to these matches. Coach George Riser of Ouachita said he was anxious to arrange games for his girl performers.

ATHLETICS SWAMPED BY GIANTS, 15 TO 2

LAKE CHARLES, La., March 11.—(AP)—If it was power Bill Terry wanted in his New York Giants this year, the 15 to 2 walloping the club gave the Philadelphia Athletics in the first exhibition game today must have been pretty satisfactory.

Big Zeke Bonura smacked the first pitch over the fence to score three runners ahead. Next time up he hit a triple.

Glenn Cunningham Second In 1,000 And Fourth In Mile Race

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, beaten only once in 11 previous races this season, was whipped in both his starts tonight, as long John Borican ran the fastest 1,000 yards on record to beat him by two yards in this special and the Kansan then ran last in the Columbian mile at the Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden.

Showing little interest in extending a winning streak that had run through the last six mile races in this meet, Cunningham astonished the crowd of 15,000 by running a lifeless race. He was a full 40 yards back as Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin broke the tape in 4 minutes 11.1 seconds, seven yards in front of Gene Venzke, with Archie San Romani third.

Cunningham, who started in the outside lane, never moved out of last place. With Fenske and Venzke alternately holding the lead, the 29-year-old veteran from Peabody, Kas., stuck to San Romani's heels. He made one minor challenge trying to overhaul San Romani in his favorite spot, the last backstretch, but even that wasn't good enough to bring him by the New York U. graduate student.

Cunningham revealed after the mile that he had had a temperature of 101 before the start of the 1,000, and that it was still at 99 when he toed the mark for the mile. Glenn said he had suffered an attack of influenza this week, and in addition had driven 2,500 miles as part of his job in the extension division of Kansas university.

The sturdy Kansan, usually a picture of health and always a man who keeps himself in tip-top condition, looked drawn and haggard. In view of the circumstances, it was a remarkable effort on his part to start in either race and virtually a superhuman feat to give Borican the battle he did in the shorter of their two clashes.

Borican's record breaking performance was clouded by the refusal of Starter Johnny McHugh to sign the affidavit. McHugh claimed Borican beat the gun. His signature is required before the new standard can go on the books.

Nor was the negro ace's triumph entirely satisfactory to the crowd that turned out for this final meet of the Garden season, lured by the prospect of seeing both Borican and Cunningham try for a double. For Borican, who started on the pole and streaked in to lead at the gun, ran a front race all the way and carried Cunningham out into the middle of the track down the last two straightaways.

New record or not, Borican's time

Regulars And Rookies To Report; Nashville Vets Due In Tomorrow

The town will be overrun by baseball players, come next Wednesday.

Nashville's Volunteers, some 25 strong, have been cavorting at Casino park for the past week. The squad consisted mostly of pitchers, catchers and rookies, but Monday is the deadline for Manager Larry Gilbert's regulars to report for conditioning exercises. Then on Wednesday the Monroe squad will officially open spring training and the number of diamond performers should reach well into the seventies by that time.

Manager Doug Taitt's champions and candidates for jobs in 1939 are all expected to be present or accounted for by Wednesday, when the White Sox will take their first workout as a group. Taitt and several of his hirelings have been working with the Vols for the past week but with the increase to almost normal strength, numerically, the squad will be on its own the latter part of the week.

Murrell Jones, the clouting rookie who aspires to the first basing job with the Sox this season, and Ed Stroud and George Taitt, fledglings who hope to catch on as members of the Monroe mound corps, also have been present during the past six workouts.

Hank Taylor, who's expected to be the Sox first string catcher this season, checked in last night and others are slated to drift into camp between now and Wednesday. Johnny Conway, shortstop and sparkplug of the championship combination last season, has been expected since last Wednesday but so far he hasn't shown up. Johnny wrote friends that he would be here "about the 8th or 9th."

Three rookies Taitt signed up in Nashville last winter are among the contingent expected before Wednesday. The squad includes, other than those already mentioned, Pitchers "Red" Andrews, "Tex" Nugent, and Frank Narbut; Guy "Red" Pruitt,

VOLS TO WORK TODAY

Manager Larry Gilbert of the Nashville Vols announced yesterday that his squad would take a short workout today, starting at 12:30 o'clock, provided the weather is okay.

"We hadn't planned a Sunday workout but a number of fans who can't get out during the week asked that we go through our paces tomorrow," the popular skipper said yesterday. "It will not be as long as usual, but we're glad to schedule a workout for the baseball enthusiasts who want to watch us."

The Vols will resume the usual drill Monday.

OUACHITA GIRLS WIN 4TH STATE CAGE CROWN

Parish Team Wins 43-30; Jesuit Defeats Istrouma For Boys' Title

BATON ROUGE, La., March 11.—(AP)—Jesuit High school of New Orleans won the boys' Class A basketball title tonight in the 27th annual Louisiana State High School rally by defeating Istrouma of Baton Rouge, 43 to 36.

Calvin set down Florien, 31 to 26, for the boys' Class B championship, as the Canderday brothers each scored 10 points. Hall was high scorer for Florien with 11.

Holy Cross of New Orleans won the boys' Class A consolation game over Jena, 33 to 30, and Central defeated Rosepine, 17 to 13, for the Class B consolation.

The Ouachita Parish girls won their fourth straight state crown, downing Lyon High of Covington in the Class A division, 43 to 30, at the Coliseum.

Many won the girls' Class A consolation on a forfeit by LaGrange, and Zwolle tumbled Kilbourne, 23 to 17, for the girls' Class B consolation.

The Jesuit High team won its title over Istrouma in the Louisiana State university gymnasium before 4,000 fans.

Ulysses Wattigney, Tony Dibartolo and John Huver, three Jesuit starters, were ejected on fouls, but their subs carried on effectively.

Captain Cy Carbon and Co-captain Phil Bruno of the Holy Cross Tigers headed the list of all-state Class A players selected by tournament officials. Others chosen were Forrest Murphy, Catholic High of Baton Rouge; Fred Bankston, Istrouma, and J. Thompson, Jena.

R. Campbell, tall Ouachita forward, was the individual girl star of the tourney, scoring 38 of her team's 43 points in the finals victory over Lyon High.

third sacker, and several players to be sent here by the Dallas club, with whom the Sox have a working agreement this season.

Manager Gilbert of the Nashville club already has promised two players to the local club but their names haven't been announced, it was said yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Nashville squad is rapidly rounding into shape. Near-perfect weather during the past week kept Gilbert in high spirits and provided the athletes an opportunity to "cut loose." The warm sunshine was particularly helpful, of course, to the pitchers' routine of conditioning. The Vol squad was increased daily by the arrival of one or more players who weren't asked to check in before tomorrow.

The schedule of workouts for the two squads starting Wednesday has not been announced. If the Monroe aggregation is smaller than is expected, the two teams probably will work together for a while. However, if the full contingent of White Sox reports, one squad will work in the mornings and the other will take charge during the afternoons.

Rally officials have discontinued the light heavy and heavyweight bouts this year, leaving 10 bouts instead of the usual 12 for competition. The lightweight groups include the 90, 98, 105, 112 and 118-pound classes and the heavy division includes the 126, 135, 145, 155 and 165-pound weights. Fighters weighing 175 pounds or more, however, may stage exhibition bouts and winners will receive medals but their schools will not be awarded points, it was explained.

A championship trophy will be awarded to the team scoring the highest number of points in both the lightweight and the heavy divisions, while smaller trophies will be presented to winners in each of the divisions. Individual medals in each of the 10 weights will be given to boxers for first, second and third places.

Members of the Louisiana Tech boxing squad will serve as officials at the rally, with approval of J. M. Boyet of Vinton, president of the Louisiana State High School Athletic association.

Teams traveling more than 50 miles to Tech will be furnished sleeping quarters at the college Friday night, Mr. Folk said, but they are requested to bring their own bed covers.

stream is navigable the year 'round from New Orleans to Camden, Ark.

"This is in the center of the gas fields, which is one of the main reasons for its phenomenal development, I am told. In 1920, Monroe had only 12,675 inhabitants, not including bartenders.

"It is studded with factories, has one of the largest kraft paper mills—I started to say music halls—in the country, and is a transportation and convention center with three railroads seven paved highways radiating in all directions and eight hotels.

"Monroe is the home of the Delta Air Lines. You mail a letter here at 8:26 p.m. and it goes via Atlanta and arrives in Nashville at 3:05 a.m. weather permitting. Yes, you can do the same as the letter, only there must be quite a bit more postage stamped on your forehead.

RICH IN TRADITION

"Monroe isn't all business, though. Like other Louisiana spots, it is rich in the romance and traditions of the Old South. In the residential sections are stately ante-belum homes with towering columns, spacious lawns draped with magnificent weeping willows, azaleas, camelias and magnolias.

"Too, there are picturesque Spanish type homes. The history of this section of the Ouachita valley stretches back to that period when the vast territory west of the Mississippi was a pawn of the Spanish corwn.

"Educationally, Monroe ranks well indeed, with a million dollar high school building that houses 2,000 students. Yes, and this is the home of Northeast Center of L. S. U.—you've seen that name in the football scores.

CIVIL WAR CENTER

"The earliest inhabitants of this area were settlers who probably came up from the French missions along the Mississippi river. The real founder of Monroe was Don Juan Filhiol, a French soldier of noble blood, a typical adventurer of his time.

"He became the 'ruler' of the community, and a good one, gained the favor of King Charles X, married a Louisiana girl and lived here to the ripe age of 81, the most important man in the territory.

"During the Civil war, Monroe was a center for recruiting volunteers to serve the Confederate cause. It was shelled by a Union gunboat that came up the Ouachita and the entire town almost, was destroyed by fire. The spirit of the people remained alive, though, and it was incorporated a city in 1871.

"They say that it never gets too cold here in the winter, nor too hot in the summer. The mean temperature for winter is 50 degrees, for summer 78 degrees.

"No, sir, we don't have any rainy seasons, says the man behind the desk at the hotel. It is to be hoped that 'unusual weather' is not in the offing.

"One of the most popular pastimes here, they say, is moonlight boating. A little excursion is being planned for next week with Poco Taitt, the Monroe baseball manager, and Bill Rodda, the old gondolier direct from Venice, manning the oars."

LIONS WORK FOR RELAY CARNIVAL

Entries Of 120 Track And Field Athletes Received For Meet Here

Having taken fourth place in the Haynesville High school relays in Haynesville Friday, the Ouachita Parish high's track team will polish off preparations early this week for their relay carnival at Northeast Center of Louisiana State university Friday night.

With Fair Park and Byrd, both of Shreveport, Plain Dealing, Delhi, Crossett, Ark., and Rayville heard from, Coach Woodrow of Ouachita has, together with the 30 boys he will send into the various events, received entries on 120 track and field athletes.

Other high schools that will definitely participate in the relays, Coach Turner said, are Bolton of Alexandria, Haynesville, Minden, Summerfield and Greenville, Miss.

In winning fourth place at Haynesville, Ouachita placed first in the mile relay, first in the 440 relay, fourth in the 70-yard hurdles, fourth in the 880 relay and fourth in the mile run. Ten teams participated in the meet, which was won by Haynesville, Plain Dealing was second and Rayville third.

The relay carnival at Northeast Center will start at 7:45 Friday night and the events will be as follows: 70-yard high hurdles, two-mile relay, 100-yard dash, medley relay, exhibition medley relay by Louisiana State Normal college runners, shuttle basketball relay, 880-yard relay, football relay, 120-yard low hurdles, mile relay, pole vault, shot put, discus throw, high jump, javelin throw and broad jump.

The team that won the mile relay for Ouachita at Haynesville was composed of Young, Moore, Seivers and Gerson. Young, Moore, Seivers and Pumphrey made up the team that took first place in the 440-yard relay.

115 NOMINATED FOR AMERICA'S RACE OF RACES

William Ziegler, Jr., Entry Highest Money Winner As Juvenile

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 11.—(AP)—High winnings as a juvenile gave El Chico the spot of favorite over 114 other thoroughbreds nominated today for the 1939 Kentucky Derby.

Colonel Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs, made public the nominations for the sixty-fifth running of the $50,000 added American turf classic for three-year-olds at a mile and a quarter, to be run May 6.

The William Ziegler, Jr., entry won all of seven starts to bring his owner $84,100, including the youthful stakes at Jamaica, the Dover stakes at Wilmington and the junior champion stakes at Aqueduct.

Other top-ranking money winners nominated were Challedon, $67,700; Porter's Mite, $66,940; Johnstown, $31,420; Iscoleda, $30,950; No Competition, $18,640; Time Alone, $16,715; T. M. Dorsett, $15,080; Third Degree, $12,605; and Yale O'Nine, $10,750.

In addition, the nominees included Colonel Edward R. Bradley's Benefactor; John Marsch's Lightspur, winner of the Labor Day handicap at Hawthorne; Joe W. Brown's Jockey Club stakes champion T. M. Dorsett; Mrs. O. Franzheim's Malapa Clown; Herbert Woolf's Technician, winner of the Flamingo stakes and stablemate of Lawrin, winner of the 1938 Derby; A. A. Baroni's Touch And Go, and F. A. Carreaud's Time Alone.

The nominees, 12 more than listed last year, collectively accounted for approximately $350,000 last season in about 1,000 starts. The field is the largest since 1934 when 124 were named.

Colts, as usual, dominated the list with 92. There are 17 geldings and six fillies listed. The fillies have won but once—in 1915 when Regret came home. The gelding division boasts such victories as those of Exterminator, Old Rosebud, Paul Jones and Clyde Van Dusen.

Ciencia, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, is missing from the nominations list as are Volitant, Allegro and Eight-Thirty. All are considered of Derby calibre.

Big names in the racing game are back in the fold.

The east plays its usual strong hand with William Woodward of New York, who won the Derby with Gallant Fox and Omaha, nominating Johnstown, winner of the Breeders' Futurity at Keeneland, and five other thoroughbreds.

Then there is Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable, winner of the 1931 race with Twenty Grand, represented with five eligibles including Roll and Toss, Third Degree and Lostagal.

Seven candidates were named by Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Chicago for the mid-west contingent.

The far west banks on Joy Boy from the stables of Movie Magnate Louis B. Mayer. The King ranch of Texas, owner of Ciencia, placed in nomination for the southwest Brazado, Equestian and Drawstraws.

Other nationally-known patrons represented with nominees include Samuel D. Riddle, whose War Admiral topped the field in 1937; Warren Wright, owner of Calumet Farms and Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Eddie Briets

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Last letter Doc Sutherland got before leaving Pitt was from a kid who asked for the seat of Marshall Goldberg's football pants. P. S.: He got 'em by return mail. . . . Bulletin from Florida: Physicians now say Old Man Mose's arm is dead. . . . 150 members of F. F. V.'s turned out in full dress at Norfolk the other night to welcome Carl Voyles, new William and Mary football coach. What would old Tex Rickard have said if he had blown into town last night and found tennis holding forth in the Garden and boxing in the Hippodrome?

All you have to do to get into the Indianapolis 500-mile race this year is drive ten miles at 110 M. P. H. and live to pull into the pits. . . . To guard against them catching the flu, Coach Gordon White has his Roanoke college Maroons quarantined in the gym until time to leave tomorrow for the New York invitation cage tournament. . . . If anything comes of that talk of buying a big league ball club for Mickey Cochrane, Leo Fisher, the auto magnate, will angel the syndicate. . . . Sid Luckman has joined the man hunt up at Columbia for a successor to Sid Luckman.

Jack Doyle, the Broadway price maker, will ignore the Yanks entirely when he issues his 1939 major league odds. . . . Add those doing all right: Doc Sutherland, who already has had two free meals on Pitt alumni since joining the unemployed, and Art Hillhouse, ex-Long Island university cage star, who turned pro and now plays on two teams in two different leagues down in Pennsylvania. . . . Baseball tip: Mme. Zantilla, the fortune teller, has pitched her tent at Orlando and is predicting (at 50 cents a predict) the Senators will win the American league pennant.

Among those who did not compete in the K. of C. track meet tonight was a guy from Holliston, Mass. . . . He wrote Director Frank Brennan he wanted to enter the sprint, handicap 1,000, the Casey 600 and the Columbian mile. . . . Brennan called up Dan Ferris of the A. A. U. to find if he had heard of the phenom. . . . "Yep," replied Ferris, "he's the same one who wanted to come down to the nationals and enter the shot put, 1,500 meters, pole vault and the sprints." . . . Brennan finally trimmed the fellow down to the sprint, but gave up entirely when he demanded sole use of the Garden for practice Friday and Saturday afternoon.

Frank Strafaci, ex-public links champ, is off to Florida to realize a major ambition and team up with Gene Sarazen in the St. Augustine pro-amateur. . . . Chicago, St. Louis and Boston want Tony Galento against Buddy Knox. . . . Spokane, Wash., is going to pay the Washington Redskins $10,000 to train out there, which is just what Baton Rouge, La., is paying the baseball Giants. . . . Trainer George Conway's statement that War Admiral is done with races goes despite the Seabiscuit development. . . . The Cards have a standing offer from the Dodgers of $200,000 for Joe Medwick.

$25,000 ADDED HANDICAP IS CAPTURED BY CRAVAT

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(AP)—Townsend B. Martin's Cravat came up in the stretch today and won the $25,000 added San Juan Capistrano Handicap, mile and one-half grand finale of the racing season at Santa Anita park.

With Jockey Jack Westrope in the saddle, Martin's 4-year-old took charge in the final drive down in front of the grandstand and won going away from Neil McCarthy's Today, Jacola, filly owned by Edward Friendly, ran third.

Cravat broke the track record for the distance, and was timed at 2:30 2/5. The old mark, set by Dark Accent, was 2:32 1/5.

CHICAGO ENTERS BID FOR BATTLE

Indications Are, However, That Tony And Joe Will Fight In New York

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Chicago put in its bid today for the Joe Louis-Tony Galento punch party in June, but after looking over the field, it appears more certain than ever the fight won't get ' farther away from Times square than 161st street and River avenue.

That address is the home of baseball's world champions, the New York Yankees. The stadium is large enough for boxing extravaganzas, even so weighty as to involve Two-Ton Tony.

New York state's unpredictable three-man boxing commission will tell Promoter Mike Jacobs next Tuesday whether he can hold the fight here. The commissioners, Bill Brown in particular, haven't been any too keen about the Newark Night Stick, but the thought of kicking out a possible million-dollar gate can make a lot of difference.

"Uncle Mike" has two very good reasons for holding this fight fiesta here, and both of them are "do-re-me."

"This bout," he says, "should come awful close to hitting the million dollar mark in the Yankee stadium or Philadelphia. But I do business in New York year after year, so I have to satisfy the local fans first."

Commissioner Brown once traveled 75 miles to see Galento in a training camp, but when he arrived Tony wasn't around. He remembers that useless trip and already has gone on record as saying he'll never give his blessing to the scrap. A second commissioner, D. Walker Wear, is on the opposite side of the fence. He contended today that as long as the fight will take place somewhere, "it might as well be in New York."

This leaves it up to General John J. Phelan, the chairman, and the general isn't talking yet.

The talk is that the commission, even as you and I, can't laugh off one million potatoes. But Chicago, Philadelphia and others interested in seeing the go still have an outside chance.

WOMEN'S STATE GOLF TOURNEY DATES GIVEN

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Nelson Whitney of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana Women's Golf association, announced today the 1939 women's state tournament would be played at the Metairie golf club here May 29 to June 3.

Edna Saenger of Shreveport will defend the championship she won at the New Orleans Country club last year. Arrayed against her will be the 1938 runner-up, Mrs. Leon Wolf, Jr., of New Orleans, Mrs. Sam Israel, Jr., of New Orleans, 1936 and 1937 champion, and others.

Two new features will be introduced in competition this year. One will be the forming of flights of 32 players each. The other will be the adoption of the stymie rule for all flights. In the past flights of 16 players were formed and stymies were not played.

Boys at Emporia, Kans., State Teachers' college never have trouble finding dates. There are 950 girl students and only 686 boys.

PURPLES BEAT GOLDEN ELEVEN

Short Sparks Team To 25-0 Victory In Northeast Center Practice

Sparked by Quarterback Don Short, the Purples gained their second straight victory yesterday over the Golds in the weekly intra-squad football game featuring spring practice at Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. The score was 25 to 0. Regular game conditions prevailed.

Short turned in three beautiful off-tackle slashes, one for 55 yards and two for 45 yards each. He also scored two of the four touchdowns made by the Purples and passed to John Malone, an end, for another. Kilpatrick, a sub for Short, scored the remaining tally on a 35-yard sprint and Short passed to Harry Morton, halfback, for the point after.

The Purples scored twice in the first quarter, once in the second and once in the fourth. The entire team played fine defensive football and was far superior to the Golds in blocking. Hard, clean blocking led to all of the Purple tallies.

George Perry, who ordinarily plays tackle, was shifted to center for the Golds and won commendation from Coach James Malone for his fine playing. The coach was so impressed that he intimated that Perry might be shifted permanently to the pivot position.

Coach Malone also lauded Tuffy Westerman of the Purples for his blocking and said Short showed better quarterbacking and broken field running than Bob Kellogg, now of Tulane, at any time during the latter's gridiron career at Northeast Center. Besides leading in the scoring, Short completed seven of nine passes attempted.

Several hundred spectators witnessed the game and will be treated to another next Saturday.

IMPRUDENT TAKES HALF-MILE SPRINT

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Imprudent defeated a fleet field of two-year-olds in a half-mile sprint at the Fair Grounds today, winning fairly easily in the slow time of :48 2-5. The daughter of Whiskalong paid $3.20 to win in the $2 mutuels.

Nosy closed fast to take second place, and Liberty Queen was third.

Old Rosebush won the six furlongs sprint attraction, paying $6.60, with Bunny Baby second and Phalasan third. Mrs. Sam Orr's Hope Eternal took the mile and sixteenth allowance race, paying $4.80 to head Rough Diamond and Catomar.

OUACHITA GIRLS WIN 4TH STATE CAGE CROWN

Parish Team Wins 43-30; Jesuit Defeats Istrouma For Boys' Title

BATON ROUGE, La., March 11.—(AP)—Jesuit High school of New Orleans won the boys' Class A basketball title tonight in the 27th annual Louisiana State High School rally by defeating Istrouma of Baton Rouge, 43 to 36.

MONROE SQUAD WILL JOIN VOLS

third sacker, and several players to be sent here by the Dallas club, with whom the Sox have a working agreement this season.

Manager Gilbert of the Nashville club already has promised two players to the local club but their names haven't been announced, it was said yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Nashville squad is rapidly rounding into shape. Near-perfect weather during the past week kept Gilbert in high spirits and provided the athletes an opportunity to "cut loose." The warm sunshine was particularly helpful, of course, to the pitchers' routine of conditioning. The Vol squad was increased daily by the arrival of one or more players who weren't asked to check in before tomorrow.

The schedule of workouts for the two squads starting Wednesday has not been announced. If the Monroe aggregation is smaller than is expected, the two teams probably will work together for a while. However, if the full contingent of White Sox reports, one squad will work in the mornings and the other will take charge during the afternoons.

Rally officials have discontinued the light heavy and heavyweight bouts this year, leaving 10 bouts instead of the usual 12 for competition. The lightweight groups include the 90, 98, 105, 112 and 118-pound classes and the heavy division includes the 126, 135, 145, 155 and 165-pound weights. Fighters weighing 175 pounds or more, however, may stage exhibition bouts and winners will receive medals but their schools will not be awarded points, it was explained.

A championship trophy will be awarded to the team scoring the highest number of points in both the lightweight and the heavy divisions, while smaller trophies will be presented to winners in each of the divisions. Individual medals in each of the 10 weights will be given to boxers for first, second and third places.

Members of the Louisiana Tech boxing squad will serve as officials at the rally, with approval of J. M. Boyet of Vinton, president of the Louisiana State High School Athletic association.

Teams traveling more than 50 miles to Tech will be furnished sleeping quarters at the college Friday night. Mr. Folk said, but they are requested to bring their own bed covers.

stream is navigable the year 'round from New Orleans to Camden, Ark.

"This is in the center of the gas fields, which is one of the main reasons for its phenomenal development, I am told. In 1920, Monroe had only 12,675 inhabitants, not including bartenders.

"It is studded with factories, has one of the largest kraft paper mills—I started to say music halls—in the country, and is a transportation and convention center with three railroads seven paved highways radiating in all directions and eight hotels.

"Monroe is the home of the Delta Air Lines. You mail a letter here at 8:26 p.m. and it goes via Atlanta and arrives in Nashville at 3:05 a.m. weather permitting. Yes, you can do the same as the letter, only there must be quite a bit more postage stamped on your forehead.

RICH IN TRADITION

"Monroe isn't all business, though. Like other Louisiana spots, it is rich in the romance and traditions of the Old South. In the residenital sections are stately ante-belum homes with towering columns, spacious lawns draped with magnificent weeping willows, azaleas, camelias and magnolias.

"Too, there are picturesque Spanish type homes. The history of this section of the Ouachita valley stretches back to that period when the vast territory west of the Mississippi was a pawn of the Spanish corwn.

"Educationally, Monroe ranks well indeed, with a million dollar high school building that houses 2,000 students. Yes, and this is the home of Northeast Center of L. S. U.—you've seen that name in the football scores.

CIVIL WAR CENTER

"The earliest inhabitants of this area were settlers who probably came up from the French missions along the Mississippi river. The real founder of Monroe was Don Juan Filhiol, a French soldier of noble blood, a typical adventurer of his time.

"He became the 'ruler' of the community, and a good one, gained the favor of King Charles X, married a Louisiana girl and lived here to the ripe age of 81, the most important man in the territory.

"During the Civil war, Monroe was a center for recruiting volunteers to serve the Confederate cause. It was shelled by a Union gunboat that came up the Ouachita and the entire town, almost, was destroyed by fire. The spirit of the people remained alive, though, and it was incorporated a city in 1871.

"They say that it never gets too cold here in the winter, nor too hot in the summer. The mean temperature for winter is 50 degrees, for summer 78 degrees.

"No, sir, we don't have any rainy seasons, says the man behind the desk at the hotel. It is to be hoped that 'unusual weather' is not in the offing.

"One of the most popular pastimes here, they say, is moonlight boating. A little excursion is being planned for next week with Poco Taitt, the Monroe baseball manager, and Bill Rodda, the old gondolier direct from Venice, manning the oars."

LIONS WORK FOR RELAY CARNIVAL

Entries Of 120 Track And Field Athletes Received For Meet Here

Having taken fourth place in the Haynesville High school relays in Haynesville Friday, the Ouachita Parish high's track team will polish off preparations early this week for their relay carnival at Northeast Center of Louisiana State university Friday night.

With Fair Park and Byrd, both of Shreveport, Plain Dealing, Delhi, Crossett, Ark., and Rayville heard from, Coach Woodrow of Ouachita has, together with the 30 boys he will send into the various events, received entries on 120 track and field athletes.

Other high schools that will definitely participate in the relays, Coach Turner said, are Bolton of Alexandria, Haynesville, Minden, Summerfield and Greenville, Miss.

In winning fourth place at Haynesville, Ouachita placed first in the mile relay, first in the 440 relay, fourth in the 70-yard hurdles, fourth in the 880 relay and fourth in the mile run. Ten teams participated in the meet, which was won by Haynesville, Plain Dealing was second and Rayville third.

The relay carnival at Northeast Center will start at 7:45 Friday night and the events will be as follows: 70-yard high hurdles, two-mile relay, 100-yard dash, medley relay, exhibition medley relay by Louisiana State Normal college runners, shuttle basketball relay, 880-yard relay, football relay, 120-yard low hurdles, mile relay, pole vault, shot put, discus throw, high jump, javelin throw and broad jump.

The team that won the mile relay for Ouachita at Haynesville was composed of Young, Moore, Seivers and Gerson. Young, Moore, Seivers and Pumphrey made up the team that took first place in the 440-yard relay.

115 NOMINATED FOR AMERICA'S RACE OF RACES

William Ziegler, Jr., Entry Highest Money Winner As Juvenile

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 11.—(AP)—High winnings as a juvenile gave El Chico the spot of favorite over 114 other thoroughbreds nominated today for the 1939 Kentucky Derby.

Colonel Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs, made public the nominations for the sixty-fifth running of the $50,000 added American turf classic for three-year-olds at a mile and a quarter, to be run May 6.

The William Ziegler, Jr., entry won all of seven starts to bring his owner $84,100, including the youthful stakes at Jamaica, the Dover stakes at Wilmington and the junior champion stakes at Aqueduct.

Other top-ranking money winners nominated were Challedon, $67,700; Porter's Mite, $66,940; Johnstown, $31,420; Iscoleda, $30,950; No Competition, $18,640; Time Alone, $16,715; T. M. Dorsett, $15,080; Third Degree, $12,605; and Yale O'Nine, $10,750.

In addition, the nominees included Colonel Edward R. Bradley's Benefactor; John Marsch's Lightspur, winner of the Labor Day handicap at Hawthorne; Joe W. Brown's Jockey Club stakes champion T. M. Dorsett; Mrs. O. Franzheim's Malapa Clown; Herbert Woolf's Technician, winner of the Flamingo stakes and stablemate of Lawrin, winner of the 1938 Derby; A. A. Baroni's Touch And Go, and F. A. Carreaud's Time Alone.

The nominees, 12 more than listed last year, collectively accounted for approximately $350,000 last season in about 1,000 starts. The field is the largest since 1934 when 124 were named.

Colts, as usual, dominated the list with 92. There are 17 geldings and six fillies listed. The fillies ave won but once—in 1915 when Regret came home. The gelding division boasts such victories as those of Exterminator, Old Rosebud, Paul Jones and Clyde Van Dusen.

Ciencia, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, is missing from the nominations list as are Volitant, Allegro and Eight-Thirty. All are considered of Derby calibre.

Big names in the racing game are back in the fold.

The east plays its usual strong hand with William Woodward of New York, who won the Derby with Gallant Fox and Omaha, nominating Johnstown, winner of the Breeders' Futurity at Keeneland, and five other thoroughbreds.

Then there is Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable, winner of the 1931 race with Twenty Grand, represented with five eligibles including Roll and Toss, Third Degree and Lostagal.

Seven candidates were named by Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Chicago for the mid-west contingent.

The far west banks on Joy Boy from the stables of Movie Magnate Louis B. Mayer. The King ranch of Texas, owner of Ciencia, placed in nomination for the southwest Brazado, Equestian and Drawstraws.

Other nationally-known patrons represented with nominees include Samuel D. Riddle, whose War Admiral topped the field in 1937; Warren Wright, owner of Calumet Farms and Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

$25,000 ADDED HANDICAP IS CAPTURED BY CRAVAT

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(AP)—Townsend B. Martin's Cravat came up in the stretch today and won the $25,000 added San Juan Capistrano Handicap, mile and one-half grand finale of the racing season at Santa Anita park.

With Jockey Jack Westrope in the saddle, Martin's 4-year-old took charge in the final drive down in front of the grandstand and won going away from Neil McCarthy's Today. Jacola, filly owned by Edward Friendly, ran third.

Cravat broke the track record for the distance, and was timed at 2:30 2/5. The old mark, set by Dark Accent, was 2:32 1/5.

Indications Are, However, That Tony And Joe Will Fight In New York

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Chicago put in its bid today for the Joe Louis-Tony Galento punch party in June, but after looking over the field, it appears more certain than ever the fight won't get any farther away from Times square than 161st street and River avenue.

That address is the home of baseball's world champions, the New York Yankees. The stadium is large enough for boxing extravaganzas, even so weighty as to involve Two-Ton Tony.

New York state's unpredictable three-man boxing commission will tell Promoter Mike Jacobs next Tuesday whether he can hold the fight here. The commissioners, Bill Brown in particular, haven't been any too keen about the Newark Night Stick, but the thought of kicking out a possible million-dollar gate can make a lot of difference.

"Uncle Mike" has two very good reasons for holding this fight fiesta here, and both of them are "do-re-me."

"This bout," he says, "should come awful close to hitting the million dollar mark in the Yankee stadium or Philadelphia. But I do business in New York year after year, so I have to satisfy the local fans first."

Commissioner Brown once traveled 75 miles to see Galento in a training camp, but when he arrived Tony wasn't around. He remembers that useless trip and already has gone on record as saying he'll never give his blessing to the scrap. A second commissioner, D. Walker Wear, is on the opposite side of the fence. He contended today that as long as the fight will take place somewhere, "it might as well be in New York."

This leaves it up to General John J. Phelan, the chairman, and the general isn't talking yet.

The talk is that the commission, even as you and I, can't laugh off one million potatoes. But Chicago, Philadelphia and others interested in seeing the go still have an outside chance.

WOMEN'S STATE GOLF TOURNEY DATES GIVEN

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Nelson Whitney of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana Women's Golf association, announced today the 1939 women's state tournament would be played at the Metairie golf club here May 29 to June 3.

Edna Saenger of Shreveport will defend the championship she won at the New Orleans Country club last year. Arrayed against her will be the 1938 runner-up, Mrs. Leon Wolf, Jr., of New Orleans, Mrs. Sam Israel, Jr., of New Orleans, 1936 and 1937 champion, and others.

Two new features will be introduced in competition this year. One will be the forming of flights of 32 players each. The other will be the adoption of the stymie rule for all flights. In the past flights of 16 players were formed and stymies were not played.

PURPLES BEAT GOLDEN ELEVEN

Short Sparks Team To 25-0 Victory In Northeast Center Practice

Sparked by Quarterback Don Short, the Purples gained their second straight victory yesterday over the Golds in the weekly intra-squad football game featuring spring practice at Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. The score was 25 to 0. Regular game conditions prevailed.

Short turned in three beautiful off-tackle slashes, one for 55 yards and two for 45 yards each. He also scored two of the four touchdowns made by the Purples and passed to John Malone, an end, for another. Kilpatrick, a sub for Short, scored the remaining tally on a 35-yard sprint and Short passed to Harry Morton, halfback, for the point after.

The Purples scored twice in the first quarter, once in the second and once in the fourth. The entire team played fine defensive football and was far superior to the Golds in blocking. Hard, clean blocking led to all of the Purple tallies.

George Perry, who ordinarily plays tackle, was shifted to center for the Golds and won commendation from Coach James Malone for his fine playing. The coach was so impressed that he intimated that Perry might be shifted permanently to the pivot position.

Coach Malone also lauded Tuffy Westerman of the Purples for his blocking and said Short showed better quarterbacking and broken field running than Bob Kellogg, now of Tulane, at any time during the latter's gridiron career at Northeast Center. Besides leading in the scoring, Short completed seven of nine passes attempted.

Several hundred spectators witnessed the game and will be treated to another next Saturday.

Coach Malone expressed himself as highly satisfied with the progress being made by all of the Indians.

Old Rosebush won the six furlongs sprint attraction, paying $6.60, with Bunny Baby second and Phalasan third. Mrs. Sam Orr's Hope Eternal took the mile and sixteenth allowance race, paying $4.80 to head Rough Diamond and Catomar.

...ment swung forcefully in approval ... new premier's foreign interven... to halt domestic crisis.

...cabinet was formed under the ...ership of Karl Sidor, vice-pre... of the central government and Slovak representative in Prague, to eliminate the influence of Slovak separatists.

Not a single member of the deposed government of Dr. Joseph Tiso was included in the new line-up. Premier Tiso's dismissal yesterday by President Emil Hacha of the central government precipitated a crisis which many had feared would invite foreign intervention in Czecho-Slovakia for the second time in six months.

Simultaneously with announcement of the new cabinet the federal government showed concern over German radio broadcast reports of Czech troop movements along Germany's border. The government sent an official communication to Berlin denying there had been any troop movements whatsoever.

Formation of the new cabinet without a single member of the deposed government meant, on the surface, a complete victory for President Hacha's action in dismissing Premier Tiso and two of his ministers and taking military measures to prevent an alleged independence putsch.

The new government will face its first test in the Slovak parliament Tuesday, when extremists will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether they can rally sufficient votes to reject it.

The Slovaks had presented at tonight's conference a recommendation of the Slovak parliament that Dr. Tiso be reappointed.

All that the Prague government asked, a spokesman said, was that the new Slovak cabinet be formed without former members who "look with indulgence on actions of questionable elements."

"Such a government," said the spokesman, "would be the best guarantee for the autonomy of Slovakia and the unity of the Czecho-Slovak state."

REDS' DRIVEN FROM FLAMING QUARTERS

MADRID, March 11.—(AP)—General Jose Miaja's republicans drove Communist rebels from flaming headquarters in the heart of Madrid today and fought a sharp artillery battle with nationalist gunners at the edge of the city in the sixth day of "the war within a war."

The peace-seeking national defense council, formed before dawn Monday and forced to fight for power over the Communists all week, felt the fury of nationalist guns just as it seemed to be getting the upper hand over the rebels.

Enemy artillery on the southeast fringe of the city opened up in the morning while Miaja's motorized troops, with 18 field guns were driving the Communists from the first of two headquarters and clearing virtually the whole length of broad Calle de Alcala, which cuts diagonally through the capital.

The boom of guns on the republican-nationalist front mingled with the din of artillery and machine-gun fire within the city.

Then, around 11 a.m. (6 a.m., eastern standard time, the fighting at the front died down.

Inside the city, the national defense troops used their field guns and fired the Communist party's provincial headquarters.

Its occupants were captured. An hour later the loyal troops routed both men and women rebels from the cellars of the Communist central headquarters.

Other Communists were dislodged earlier from a stronghold in Plaza de la Independencia, in the middle of the city, fled to a nearby maternity hospital, where they defied arrest. The hospital was filled with about 1,000 patients, expectant mothers and those with newborn infants.

Barricades erected by the rebels on Plaza de la Independencia were demolished by Miaja's men after the Communists had been driven overnight from their fortress on the square.

Two or three Communist strongholds remained in the Ventas quarter and there were short-lived fights there early this morning, when scattered groups of rebels attacked outlying encampments of Miaja's motorized detachments.

Captured Communists were quoted as telling Miaja's officers:

"We were told (ousted Premier Juan) Negrin would see that we won the war against Generalissimo Franco because Russia supported us but that Negrin was lying in a dungeon in Madrid by order of Casado (General Segismundo Casado, head of the national defense council until General Miaja took over).

"So we said we were willing to come to free Negrin."

Most of those captured were young peasant soldiers.

FIREMEN SPONSOR ANNUAL EGG HUNT

will be a bingo party on March 20 which is being planned for the central fire station.

Bands will furnish music for the Easter egg hunt, stated Captain Roberts, and an enjoyable time is anticipated for kiddies and their parents from many cities and towns of this section.

In order to see that all children may get proper attention and the opportunity to win prizes, a section of the park will be reserved for them for their egg hunt, and older children will have another part of the park assigned for their hunt. Boys and girls also will be separated in the quest for eggs.

The chief essential for a successful day will be favorable weather conditions and Captain Roberts stated that he has already put in a request to the weather man to deal kindly with the [illegible] on Easter

...ES RELINQUISHES TAMMANY LEADERSHIP

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—After 28 years of undisputed sovereignty over the 11th assembly district Democratic machine, James J. Hines relinquished active leadership today, although he still retained his Tammany title.

His loyal followers last night clamorously refused to accept his resignation, despite his conviction of policy racketeering, but they designated Bernard F. Plunkett, long an associate of Hines, to assume the actual duties of the leadership.

Chairman of the district Democratic committee, Plunkett will act as leader and sit on the Tammany executive committee. He also was regarded as a likely successor to Hines, at least as titular leader, if Hines goes to prison.

bettered Cunningham's indoor mark of 2:10.1, set in this meet on March 16, 1935, and also surpassed the official world outdoor mark of 2:09.7 set by Elroy Robinson of San Francisco on May 15, 1937. Cunningham's time also bettered both of those standards. Glenn was clocked in 2:09.2, but since there were only two official timers for his second-place effort, it cannot be accepted as a record in case Borican's application should be refused.

Borican got away at the gun so fast and with such a margin that it appeared quite likely he might have beaten the gun. If he did, though, it seemed to most observers that McHugh should have called them back then and there.

It was Cunningham's second defeat of the winter, the second by Borican and the second at this distance.

The two-year-streak of negro sprint successes was broken in the 60-yard dash final as Perrin Walker, lanky Oglethorpe university graduate student, whipped three negroes in 6.2 seconds, equalling the meet record. Eulace Peacock was second, with Herbert Thompson, the national champion who had won 28 of 29 dashes, third and Ben Johnson last.

Another national champion, Allan Tolmich of Detroit, repeated his 1938 victory in the 60-yard high hurdles, winning easily in 7.4 seconds. Jay Shields, winner of the intercollegiate title a week ago, was second; Larry O'Connor of Toronto third, and Tom Garland of Manhattan fourth.

Dick Ganslen, Columbia's I. C. 4-A champion, took the pole vault with a leap of 13 feet 9 inches and then failed at 14 feet 1 inch in three special tries.

By letting loose a half-lap sprint that looked as if he were still as fresh as a new-caught codfish, Don Lash, the Indiana state policeman, trimmed Tommy Deckard of Bloomington, Ind., his favorite stalking horse, in a 9:02.4 two mile run, the fastest of the year.

It also was one of the better distance races of the season, as three men, Miklos Szabo of Hungary, George De George of the New York A. C. and Veteran Joe McCluskey, alternated in setting the pace until Lash took charge of the finish. Don beat Deckard by seven yards, with McCluskey a good third and De George fourth. Szabo, outdoor world record-holder, was a well-beaten last after showing the way for 14 of the 22 laps.

Borican coming back for the second half of his attempted double, finished strong to take second place behind National 600-Meter Champion Charley Beetham of the 69th Regiment A. A. in the 20th running of the classic Casey 600. Beetham hit the tape in 1:11.3, only two-tenths of a second off the world record to which Cunningham helped chase Jim Herbert a year ago, and finished seven yards in front.

Borican passed Wes Wallace, the I. C. 4-A champion at this distance in the home stretch, while Dick Gill of Boston was fourth and Herbert fifth.

In the night's fastest mile relay, New York university's intercollegiate champions just nosed out Holy Cross in 3:20.4 as Herbert ran a beautiful anchor leg. Fordham, turning in 7:47.6, won the two mile.

I. C. 4-A Champion Artie Byrnes came through in the high jump to clear 6 feet 5 inches, one inch better than the next three men.

BEATS GLENN'S RECORD

BALTIMORE, March 11.—(AP)—John Arthur Munski, lanky star from the University of Missouri, smashed Glenn Cunningham's flat track mile record by one and a half seconds tonight to establish a new mark at four minutes 13.5 seconds.

The Montana mountaineer led a field of collegiate runners in the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment track and field meet where Cunningham established a record last year of four minutes, 15 seconds.

MISSISSIPPI STATE FRESHMAN DROWNS

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—Henry Fred Wahrendorff, 20-year-old freshman of Meridian, drowned this afternoon while swimming with four companions in "Eckies pool," a small artificial lake on the horticulture farm near the main campus.

Julian Comfort, of Kosciusko, said he managed to reach Wahrendorff's hand as the victim went under, but could not hold him.

Comfort said, "I started across several yards behind Wahrendorff, passed him and looked back to see him go partially under. I immediately turned and managed to catch his hand, but could not hold on to him."

The other three in the group, E. E. Jones of Grenada, Edwin Triplett of Kosciusko, and James Mohead of Lula, did not know Wahrendorff was in distress until too late to help.

SENATOR NOE ILL

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Illness of State Senator James A. Noe, announced candidate for governor, here caused postponement late yesterday in the trial of six men arrested on loitering charges in connection with distribution of Noe campaign handbills. The senator was suffering from influenza.

PRUSSIAN WAITER HELD AT ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Chief of Detectives John J. Grosch said tonight a 35-year-old Prussian waiter from New York was under arrest here for questioning in connection with the hammer slaying of Fred Ludwig, 43, in Yonkers, N. Y., March 1.

Chief Grosch said the arrest was made at the request of Yonkers police, and that they were holding Ludwig's widow there.

Grosch listed the waiter as Gustav Schweinberger, who has been using the name of Gerald Arnold since he came to the United States in 1926.

The chief of detectives declared Arnold told him that he lured Ludwig, a cook, into his automobile in New York City after the latter had threatened the life of his wife when he found her in the company of Arnold at the Ludwig home March 1.

"I asked him to go with me and have a drink," Grosch quoted Arnold as saying. "He got into the back of an automobile and we drove to one place. There was too much light there. Then I took a hammer out of the pocket of the automobile and drove into a lane. I stopped the car, leaned over the seat of the automobile and struck him several times on the head with the hammer."

Chief Grosch said Arnold related that he left Ludwig's body in the lane in Yonkers and got a bus to New Orleans. He arrived here March 3.

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Leading stocks shifted over a slightly irregular route in today's brief market until a last-minute selling flurry in steels and motors brought declines running to a point or more among recent climbers.

A handful of favorites edged into new high territory for the past year at the start, but most failed to hold.

Dealings, fairly slow the greater part of the proceedings, picked up at the last and transfers approximated 650,000 shares for the two hours.

Although traders cashed profits without much opposition, brokerage optimism seemed to have broadened with the latest step of the SEC in liberalizing short-selling rules arousing thoughts of much livelier markets in the future. Further modifications of speculative regulations were looked for in the wake of Monday's meeting at Washington of representatives of 16 stock exchanges and the securities and exchange authorities.

Business prospects were still a bolstering influence, it was said. At the same time another look was taken at the foreign scene as German intervention in the Slovak independence row was seen as a possibility, communist resistance to peace in Spain continued and Bolshevik Leader Stalin heaped censure on the heads of the democracies.

American Telephone was an isolated gainer, getting up about 3 points at the best to another 1938-39 peak.

Moderately resistant were Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Electric, du Pont and Union Carbide.

Steels were unresponsive to forecasts of an expansion in mill operations next week.

Bonds were selectively higher, with South American loans once more popular. Commodities were a trifle mixed.

Sugar

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Commission house and local trade demand broadened in the domestic sugar futures market toward the close today. Active deliveries advanced as much as 2 points. Selling was scattered with Cuban offerings limited to a scale upward.

World futures closed unchanged in quiet trade with sales 700 tons. The main influence continued to be the narrowness of the London market. May sold at 1.15 and the final bid was at that level.

Raws here were quiet and steady. An operator bought 1,000 tons of Philippines at 2.76 with offering sealed up to 2.80 cents for duty frees. Cubas were nominally quoted 2.78 on a duty paid basis. Refined remained within a rang eof 4.25 to 4.40 cents.

Sugar futures No. 3 closed 2 higher to 1 lower. Sales 9,450 tons.

SLOVAKIA'S CRY GROWS STRONGER

negotiators acting hurriedly in apprehension over possible foreign intervention in their domestic crisis.

The cabinet was formed under the premiership of Karl Sidor, vice-premier of the central government and Slovak representative in Prague, to eliminate the influence of Slovak separatists.

Not a single member of the deposed government of Dr. Joseph Tiso was included in the new line-up. Premier Tiso's dismissal yesterday by President Emil Hacha of the central government precipitated a crisis which many had feared would invite foreign intervention in Czecho-Slovakia for the second time in six months.

Simultaneously with announcement of the new cabinet the federal government showed concern over German radio broadcast reports of Czech troop movements along Germany's border. The government sent an official communication to Berlin denying there had been any troop movements whatsoever.

Formation of the new cabinet without a single member of the deposed government meant, on the surface, a complete victory for President Hacha's action in dismissing Premier Tiso and two of his ministers and taking military measures to prevent an alleged independence putsch.

The new government will face its first test in the Slovak parliament Tuesday, when extremists will have an opportunity to demonstrate whether they can rally sufficient votes to reject it.

The Slovaks had presented at tonight's conference a recommendation of the Slovak parliament that Dr. Tiso be reappointed.

All that the Prague government asked, a spokesman said, was that the new Slovak cabinet be formed without former members who "look with indulgence on actions of questionable elements."

"Such a government," said the spokesman, "would be the best guarantee for the autonomy of Slovakia and the unity of the Czecho-Slovak state."

'REDS' DRIVEN FROM FLAMING QUARTERS

MADRID, March 11.—(AP)—General Jose Miaja's republicans drove Communist rebels from flaming headquarters in the heart of Madrid today and fought a sharp artillery battle with nationalist gunners at the edge of the city in the sixth day of "the war within a war."

The peace-seeking national defense council, formed before dawn Monday and forced to fight for power over the Communists all week, felt the fury of nationalist guns just as it seemed to be getting the upper hand over the rebels.

Enemy artillery on the southeast fringe of the city opened up in the morning while Miaja's motorized troops, with 18 field guns were driving the Communists from the first of two headquarters and clearing virtually the whole length of broad Calle de Alcala, which cuts diagonally through the capital.

The boom of guns on the republican-nationalist front mingled with the din of artillery and machine-gun fire within the city.

Then, around 11 a.m. (6 a.m., eastern standard time, the fighting at the front died down.

Inside the city, the national defense troops used their field guns and fired the Communist party's provincial headquarters.

Its occupants were captured. An hour later the loyal troops routed both men and women rebels from the cellars of the Communist central headquarters.

Other Communists were dislodged earlier from a stronghold in Plaza de la Independencia, in the middle of the city, fled to a nearby maternity hospital, where they defied arrest. The hospital was filled with about 1,000 patients, expectant mothers and those with newborn infants.

Barricades erected by the rebels on Plaza de la Independencia were demolished by Miaja's men after the Communists had been driven overnight from their fortress on the square.

Two or three Communist strongholds remained in the Ventas quarter and there were short-lived fights there early this morning, when scattered groups of rebels attacked outlying encampments of Miaja's motorized detachments.

Captured Communists were quoted as telling Miaja's officers:

"We were told (ousted Premier Juan) Negrin would see that we won the war against Generalissimo Franco because Russia supported us but that Negrin was lying in a dungeon in Madrid by order of Casado (General Segismundo Casado, head of the national defense council until General Miaja took over).

"So we said we were willing to come to free Negrin."

Most of those captured were young peasant soldiers.

will be a bingo party on March 20 which is being planned for the central fire station.

Bands will furnish music for the Easter egg hunt, stated Captain Roberts, and an enjoyable time is anticipated for kiddies and their parents from many cities and towns of this section.

In order to see that all children may get proper attention and the opportunity to win prizes, a section of the park will be reserved for them for their egg hunt, and older children will have another part of the park assigned for their hunt. Boys and girls also will be separated in the quest for eggs.

The chief essential for a successful day will be favorable weather conditions and Captain Roberts stated that he has already put in a request to the weather man to deal kindly with the children of north Louisiana on Easter afternoon.

HINES RELINQUISHES TAMMANY LEADERSHIP

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—After 26 years of undisputed sovereignty over the 11th assembly district Democratic machine, James J. Hines relinquished active leadership today, although he still retained his Tammany title.

His loyal followers last night clamorously refused to accept his resignation, despite his conviction of policy racketeering, but they designated Bernard F. Plunkett, long an associate of Hines, to assume the actual duties of the leadership.

Chairman of the district Democratic committee, Plunkett will act as leader and sit on the Tammany executive committee. He also was regarded as a likely successor to Hines, at least as titular leader, if Hines goes to prison.

bettered Cunningham's indoor mark of 2:10.1, set in this meet on March 16, 1935, and also surpassed the official world outdoor mark of 2:09.7 set by Elroy Robinson of San Francisco on May 15, 1937. Cunningham's time also bettered both of those standards. Glenn was clocked in 2:09.2, but since there were only two official timers for his second-place effort, it cannot be accepted as a record in case Borican's application should be refused.

Borican got away at the gun so fast and with such a margin that it appeared quite likely he might have beaten the gun. If he did, though, it seemed to most observers that McHugh should have called them back then and there.

It was Cunningham's second defeat of the winter, the second by Borican and the second at this distance.

The two-year-streak of negro sprint successes was broken in the 60-yard dash final as Perrin Walker, lanky Oglethorpe university graduate student, whipped three negroes in 6.2 seconds, equalling the meet record. Eulace Peacock was second, with Herbert Thompson, the national champion who had won 28 of 29 dashes, third and Ben Johnson last.

Another national champion, Allan Tolmich of Detroit, repeated his 1938 victory in the 60-yard high hurdles, winning easily in 7.4 seconds. Jay Shields, winner of the intercollegiate title a week ago, was second; Larry O'Connor of Toronto third, and Tom Garland of Manhattan fourth.

Dick Ganslen, Columbia's I. C. 4-A champion, took the pole vault with a leap of 13 feet 9 inches and then failed at 14 feet 1 inch in three special tries.

By letting loose a half-lap sprint that looked as if he were still as fresh as a new-caught codfish, Don Lash, the Indiana state policeman, trimmed Tommy Deckard of Bloomington, Ind., his favorite stalking horse, in a 9:02.4 two mile run, the fastest of the year.

It also was one of the better distance races of the season, as three men, Miklos Szabo of Hungary, George De George of the New York A. C. and Veteran Joe McCluskey, alternated in setting the pace until Lash took charge of the finish. Don beat Deckard by seven yards, with McCluskey a good third and De George fourth. Szabo, outdoor world record-holder, was a well-beaten last after showing the way for 14 of the 22 laps.

Borican coming back for the second half of his attempted double, finished strong to take second place behind National 600-Meter Champion Charley Beetham of the 69th Regiment A. A. in the 20th running of the classic Casey 600. Beetham hit the tape in 1:11.3, only two-tenths of a second off the world record to which Cunningham helped chase Jim Herbert a year ago, and finished seven yards in front.

Borican passed Wes Wallace, the I. C. 4-A champion at this distance in the home stretch, while Dick Gill of Boston was fourth and Herbert fifth.

In the night's fastest mile relay, New York university's intercollegiate champions just nosed out Holy Cross in 3:20.4 as Herbert ran a beautiful anchor leg. Fordham, turning in 7:47.6, won the two mile.

I. C. 4-A Champion Artie Byrnes came through in the high jump to clear 6 feet 5 inches, one inch better than the next three men.

BEATS GLENN'S RECORD

BALTIMORE, March 11.—(AP)—John Arthur Munski, lanky star from the University of Missouri, smashed Glenn Cunningham's flat track mile record by one and a half seconds tonight to establish a new mark at four minutes 13.5 seconds.

The Montana mountaineer led a field of collegiate runners in the University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment track and field meet where Cunningham established a record last year of four minutes, 15 seconds.

MISSISSIPPI STATE FRESHMAN DROWNS

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., March 11.—(AP)—Henry Fred Wahrendorff, 20-year-old freshman of Meridian, drowned this afternoon while swimming with four companions in "Eckles pool," a small artificial lake on the horticulture farm near the main campus.

Julian Comfort, of Kosciusko, said he managed to reach Wahrendorff's hand as the victim went under, but could not hold him.

Comfort said, "I started across several yards behind Wahrendorff, passed him and looked back to see him go partially under. I immediately turned and managed to catch his hand, but could not hold on to him."

The other three in the group, E. E. Jones of Grenada, Edwin Triplett of Kosciusko, and James Mohead of Lula, did not know Wahrendorff was in distress until too late to help.

SENATOR NOE ILL

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Illness of State Senator James A. Noe, announced candidate for governor, here caused postponement late yesterday in the trial of six men arrested on loitering charges in connection with distribution of Noe campaign handbills. The senator was suffering from influenza.

PRUSSIAN WAITER HELD AT ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Chief of Detectives John J. Grosch said tonight a 35-year-old Prussian waiter from New York was under arrest here for questioning in connection with the hammer slaying of Fred Ludwig, 43, in Yonkers, N. Y., March 1.

Chief Grosch said the arrest was made at the request of Yonkers police, and that they were holding Ludwig's widow there.

Grosch listed the waiter as Gustav Schweinberger, who has been using the name of Gerald Arnold since he came to the United States in 1926.

The chief of detectives declared Arnold told him that he lured Ludwig, a cook, into his automobile in New York City after the latter had threatened the life of his wife when he found her in the company of Arnold at the Ludwig home March 1.

"I asked him to go with me and have a drink," Grosch quoted Arnold as saying. "He got into the back of an automobile and we drove to one place. There was too much light there. Then I took a hammer out of the pocket of the automobile and drove into a lane. I stopped the car, leaned over the seat of the automobile and struck him several times on the head with the hammer."

Chief Grosch said Arnold related that he left Ludwig's body in the lane in Yonkers and got a bus to New Orleans. He arrived here March 3.

Oil And Gas News

NEW ORLEANS, March 11.—(AP)—Eight new wells in Louisiana oil fields, with total initial daily production of 1,775 barrels, were listed today in the weekly report of the minerals division of the department of conservation.

All the new producers were in south Louisiana, with the Iberia field reporting three new operations. Largest producer of the week was Shell Petroleum corporation's No. 1 Ed Prather, in the Jennings field, flowing at the rate of 776 barrels a day through a quarter-inch choke.

Twenty permits for new wells were issued by the department, of which 12 were for drilling operations in south Louisiana. Four permits were issued for new wells east of the Atchafalaya river.

Daily production of crude oil in the state for the week ending March 4 is estimated by the department at 268,855 barrels, with the gulf coast fields producing a new high of 196,740 barrels, and north Louisiana reporting 72,115 barrels.

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Leading stocks shifted over a slightly irregular route in today's brief market until a last-minute selling flurry in steels and motors brought declines running to a point or more among recent climbers.

A handful of favorites edged into new high territory for the past year at the start, but most failed to hold.

Dealings, fairly slow the greater part of the proceedings, picked up at the last and transfers approximated 650,000 shares for the two hours.

Although traders cashed profits without much opposition, brokerage optimism seemed to have broadened with the latest step of the SEC in liberalizing short-selling rules arousing thoughts of much livelier markets in the future. Further modifications of speculative regulations were looked for in the wake of Monday's meeting at Washington of representatives of 16 stock exchanges and the securities and exchange authorities.

Business prospects were still a bolstering influence, it was said. At the same time another look was taken at the foreign scene as German intervention in the Slovak independence row was seen as a possibility, communist resistance to peace in Spain continued and Bolshevik Leader Stalin heaped censure on the heads of the democracies.

American Telephone was an isolated gainer, getting up about 3 points at the best to another 1938-39 peak.

Moderately resistant were Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Electric, du Pont and Union Carbide.

Steels were unresponsive to forecasts of an expansion in mill operations next week.

Bonds were selectively higher, with South American loans once more popular. Commodities were a trifle mixed.

Sugar

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Commission house and local trade demand broadened in the domestic sugar futures market toward the close today. Active deliveries advanced as much as 2 points. Selling was scattered with Cuban offerings limited to a scale upward.

World futures closed unchanged in quiet trade with sales 700 tons. The main influence continued to be the narrowness of the London market. May sold at 1.15 and the final bid was at that level.

Raws here were quiet and steady. An operator bought 1,000 tons of Philippines at 2.76 with offering scaled up to 2.80 cents for duty frees. Cubes were nominally quoted 2.78 on a duty paid basis. Refined remained within a rang eof 4.25 to 4.40 cents.

Sugar futures No. 3 closed 2 higher to 1 lower. Sales 9,450 tons.

Early in the session he asked congress for $875,000,000 to keep WPA running from February to July. It responded with an appropriation of $725,000,000 and an invitation to Mr. Roosevelt to ask for more should that sum prove inadequate. The reduction was approved in the senate by a single vote. Promptly, the president asked congress for the $150,000,000 that was lopped off. He plans to send another communication to the capitol Monday on the same subject.

Speaking frankly but not for quotation, the congressional foes of the government spending program see only a dim possibility of congress refusing to make the additional appropriation. In fact they gloomily predict that the president's entire budget of $8,995,000,000 for the next fiscal year will be approved and possibly more, too.

Such major portions of the defense and rearmament program as have reached either or both of the houses of congress have been passed by huge majorities, after sharp parliamentary battling over details. However, the proposal for establishing a naval air base at the far Pacific island of Guam, which was recommended by the navy, was thrown out by the house, largely on the ground that such action would be interpreted as an affront to nearby Japan. It is now pending in the senate naval committee, and the senate itself will have a deal with the question eventually.

Linked with the controversy over the Roosevelt foreign policy is the neutrality act and an impending fight over amendments to it. Mr. Roosevelt said only this week that in his opinion the law had made no contribution to peace, and might, in fact, have encouraged threats of war.

The reorganization bill passed by the house is but a pale reminder of the measure which caused such a congressional dispute last session, and eventually was rejected by the house. The bill permits the president to consolidate or abolish government agencies, with some specific exemptions. His reorganization orders are to become effective unless disapproved by both branches of congress within 60 days.

Their anti-Comintern pact, he observed, was a good screen behind which to attack vital interests of Britain, France and the United States.

But he said this not in anger against the totalitarian powers but rather to illustrate the alleged stupidity of the bourgeoise countries which, he said, were hoping Hitler and his friends really would attack Russia.

Some of the most experienced observers here nevertheless do not expect any radical change in Soviet-German relations.

They said they saw Hitler as committed too definitely to a crusade against communism to accept sincerely any olive branch held out by Moscow.

Stalin in effect said Moscow could not be frightened by an anti-Comintern false face which in reality, according to his contention, hides a triangle with a point aimed at British, French and United States interests.

Nor is it inclined to let itself in for a war against Germany or Japan merely to gladden the hearts of those he charged with hoping to see all three weakened.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN SITUATION RIPE

able to German demands directed at Memel and Danzig.

Germany's next objective would bring Rumania, with wheat, oil and ore, completely within the German economic orbit. The spadework already has been done.

Moreover, Hitler now is reported to be in the mood to revise the policy outlined in "Mein Kampf," his autobiographical exposition of national socialism and of his aims for future Germany, and seek a rapproachment with France based upon a division of power on the continent.

With this in view, German diplomacy is understood to be tactfully putting the brakes on Italian aspirations for colonial gains in the Mediterranean area at the expense of France.

The Italians are being urged to go easy until nationalist Spain has had a chance to become an effective partner in the Rome-Berlin axis.

loose from the 1,130-foot level about 2 1-4 miles from the highway and in five days traveled 1 3-4 miles down a slope toward the road, which is at the 150-foot elevation.

Boulders, trees and everything else in its path were enveloped in the huge mass or dropped into huge fissures created by the downhill pull of the slide. One of these fissures swallowed up a young bull.

M. H. Ayres, state highway engineer, said the mass was sliding on a base of clay which had been made slippery by seepage from the rains.

Dr. Albert J. Newlin, Santa Clara university seismologist, inspected the slide and said recent tremors in the San Andreas fault undoubtedly stimulated the movement.

The San Andreas fault runs almost the full length of California and was responsible for the San Francisco earthquake of 1906. The name of the hills is Lomeritas Muertas, Spanish for "dead hills," and they straddle the fault a short distance from here.

Ayres said a continuation of the movement might necessitate relocation of the highway.

CEREMONY TODAY DRAWS THOUSANDS

see the coronation on the balcony of the basilica at about 1 p.m. (6 a.m., central standard time).

Missions from 40 countries came to represent their governments at the coronation of a sovereign who reigns over the world's smallest state—the 109 acres of Vatican City—but over one of its greatest spiritual domains, the church of 330,000,000 Catholics.

Among them was Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to London.

Fifty princes and princesses of royal blood had seats within the vast basilica for the four-hour ceremony, one of the longest rituals of the church.

Pope Pius Saturday appointed Luigi Cardinal Maglione, former nuncio to Paris, as papal secretary of state.

For the position he had occupied until the college of cardinals elected him successor, March 2, to the late Pope Pius XI, the new pontiff chose an experienced diplomat whom he had known as a fellow-student for the priesthood.

Cardinal Maglione, 62, is just one year younger than the pope and they long have been intimate friends. Both are Italian, both diplomats and both long-experienced in European diplomatic affairs.

A French prelate, Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, archbishop of Lyon, was designated to officiate at the coronation.

Five of the 61 members of the sacred college of cardinals were prevented by illness from seeing the coronation of the pope. The five, all suffering from influenza, were Massimo Cardinal Magsimi, Vincenzo Cardinal La Puma, Domenico Cardinal Jorio, Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano and Giovanni Battista Cardinal Nasalli-Rocca.

Five United States bishops were assigned places in the procession and were privileged to kiss the pope's slippered foot and white-robed knee. They were Bishop Joseph McCarthy of Portland, Me.; Bishop Moses Kiley of Trenton, N. J.; Bishop Daniel Desmond of Alexandria, La.; Bishop James Cassidy of Fall River, Mass.; and Bishop Ralph Hayes of Pittsburgh, Pa., rector of the American college in Rome.

The vast basilica of St. Peter's, one of the largest churches in the world, was sumptuously decorated in hangings of red and gold for the ceremony.

There, just one month ago, Pope Pius XI would have celebrated the 17th anniversary of his reign had he not died two days before, on February 10.

The canopied throne was set on the balcony over the central doors of the great mother church of Catholicism while in the 15-acre plaza of St. Peter's rows of wooden railings were set up to separate the crowds into orderly sections.

but at his suggestion sympathizers of his group picketed the refrigerator car of the Growers' and Shippers' Cooperative union with placards bearing such legends as "ship union, this is a scab," and "this is a scab car." There was no attempt to prevent the loading of berries.

"Let 'em stay there for the time being," Morrison told his following. "We're not through yet by a long shot. When the time comes you'll be told what to do."

Members of the association led by Morrison stopped between trucks as they came to town today and asked the drivers to unload at the Protective union's refrigerator car.

The growers and shippers cooperative is headed by Marion T. Fannaly, long one of the berry belt's leading shippers.

Loaded cars, with 736 crates constituting a carload, are hooked to a train and sold at auction while en route to market. Morrison said he would conduct an auction at nearby Hammond in competition with the three auctions there which have handled the berry crops for years.

DEWEY BOOM IS GIVEN IMPETUS

by such writers of Dewey's availability for highest party honors in 1940 was indicated.

It impressed Washington political observers that party leaders from both up and down state New York participated in the Washington pilgrimage. Kenneth Simpson, national committeeman from New York, and Ed Jaeckle of Buffalo, a powerful figure in upstate Republican circles, were reported agreed that Dewey was a coming man politically and destined to attract national attention increasingly between now and the 1940 campaigning.

Across the party line, events are happening at an increasing tempo in Washington to focus national attention on another transplanted mid-westerner for possible 1940 Democratic presidential consideration. He is Iowa-born Commerce Secretary Harry L. Hopkins, who put in most of his public service career in New York before coming to Washington with the New Deal in 1933.

Rated President Roosevelt's most trusted lieutenant, Secretary Hopkins is the key man in the administration's new drive for recovery and cooperation with business. Whether he has political ambitions or is marked for Roosevelt favor in 1940, nobody knows; but the circumstances of his first speech as a cabinet officer, delivered in Des Moines, Ia., strongly suggest that he will be put forward as a favorite son of his native state, not as an adopted son of New York, if he figures in Democratic presidential nomination maneuvering next year.

There is no close parallel in American political history for what appears at least possible, a Dewey-Hopkins race for president in 1940. It is far too soon for either boom to be predictable. That they are talked about stresses the expectation of most political analysts that the middle western vote will decide the course of events.

Early in the session he asked congress for $875,000,000 to keep WPA running from February to July. It responded with an appropriation of $725,000,000 and an invitation to Mr. Roosevelt to ask for more should that sum prove inadequate. The reduction was approved in the senate by a single vote. Promptly, the president asked congress for the $150,000,000 that was lopped off. He plans to send another communication to the capitol Monday on the same subject.

Speaking frankly but not for quotation, the congressional foes of the government spending program see only a dim possibility of congress refusing to make the additional appropriation. In fact they gloomily predict that the president's entire budget of $8,995,000,000 for the next fiscal year will be approved and possibly more, too.

Such major portions of the defense and rearmament program as have reached either or both of the houses of congress have been passed by huge majorities, after sharp parliamentary battling over details. However, the proposal for establishing a naval air base at the far Pacific island of Guam, which was recommended by the navy, was thrown out by the house, largely on the ground that such action would be interpreted as an affront to nearby Japan. It is now pending in the senate naval committee, and the senate itself will have a deal with the question eventually.

Linked with the controversy over the Roosevelt foreign policy is the neutrality act and an impending fight over amendments to it. Mr. Roosevelt said only this week that in his opinion the law had made no contribution to peace, and might, in fact, have encouraged threats of war.

This put the senate's neutrality bloc on guard. Immediately they began talking of resisting a repeal effort with, if necessary, a filibuster.

The reorganization bill passed by the house is but a pale reminder of the measure which caused such a congressional dispute last session, and eventually was rejected by the house. The bill permits the president to consolidate or abolish government agencies, with some specific exemptions. His reorganization orders are to become effective unless disapproved by both branches of congress within 60 days.

Their anti-Comintern pact, he observed, was a good screen behind which to attack vital interests of Britain, France and the United States.

But he said this not in anger against the totalitarian powers but rather to illustrate the alleged stupidity of the bourgeoise countries which, he said, were hoping Hitler and his friends really would attack Russia.

Some of the most experienced observers here nevertheless do not expect any radical change in Soviet-German relations.

They said they saw Hitler as committed too definitely to a crusade against communism to accept sincerely any olive branch held out by Moscow.

Stalin in effect said Moscow could not be frightened by an anti-Comintern false face which in reality, according to his contention, hides a triangle with a point aimed at British, French and United States interests.

Nor is it inclined to let itself in for a war against Germany or Japan merely to gladden the hearts of those he charged with hoping to see all three weakened.

able to German demands directed at Memel and Danzig.

Germany's next objective would bring Rumania, with wheat, oil and ore, completely within the German economic orbit. The spadework already has been done.

Moreover, Hitler now is reported to be in the mood to revise the policy outlined in "Mein Kampf," his autobiographical exposition of national socialism and of his aims for future Germany, and seek a rapproachment with France based upon a division of power on the continent.

With this in view, German diplomacy is understood to be tactfully putting the brakes on Italian aspirations for colonial gains in the Mediterranean area at the expense of France.

The Italians are being urged to go easy until nationalist Spain has had a chance to become an effective partner in the Rome-Berlin axis.

loose from the 1,150-foot level about 2 1-4 miles from the highway and in five days traveled 1 3-4 miles down a slope toward the road, which is at the 150-foot elevation.

Boulders, trees and everything else in its path were enveloped in the huge mass or dropped into huge fissures created by the downhill pull of the slide. One of these fissures swallowed up a young bull.

M. H. Ayres, state highway engineer, said the mass was sliding on a base of clay which had been made slippery by seepage from the rains.

Dr. Albert J. Newlin, Santa Clara university seismologist, inspected the slide and said recent tremors in the San Andreas fault undoubtedly stimulated the movement.

The San Andreas fault runs almost the full length of California and was responsible for the San Francisco earthquake of 1906. The name of the hills is Lomeritas Muertas, Spanish for "dead hills," and they straddle the fault a short distance from here.

Ayres said a continuation of the movement might necessitate relocation of the highway.

see the coronation on the balcony of the basilica at about 1 p.m. (6 a.m., central standard time).

Missions from 40 countries came to represent their governments at the coronation of a sovereign who reigns over the world's smallest state—the 109 acres of Vatican City—but over one of its greatest spiritual domains, the church of 330,000,000 Catholics.

Among them was Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to London.

Fifty princes and princesses of royal blood had seats within the vast basilica for the four-hour ceremony, one of the longest rituals of the church.

Pope Pius Saturday appointed Luigi Cardinal Maglione, former nuncio to Paris, as papal secretary of state.

For the position he had occupied until the college of cardinals elected him successor, March 2, to the late Pope Pius XI, the new pontiff chose an experienced diplomat whom he had known as a fellow-student for the priesthood.

Cardinal Maglione, 62, is just one year younger than the pope and they long have been intimate friends. Both are Italian, both diplomats and both long-experienced in European diplomatic affairs.

A French prelate, Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, archbishop of Lyon, was designated to officiate at the coronation.

Five of the 61 members of the sacred college of cardnals were prevented by illness from seeing the coronation of the pope. The five, all suffering from influenza, were Massimo Cardinal Magsimi, Vincenzo Cardinal La Puna, Domenico Cardinal Jorio, Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano and Giovanni Battista Cardinal Nasalli-Rocca.

Five United States bishops were assigned places in the procession and were privileged to kiss the pope's slippered foot and white-robed knee. They were Bishop Joseph McCarthy of Portland, Me., Bishop Moses Kiley of Trenton, N. J.; Bishop Daniel Desmond of Alexandria, La.; Bishop James Cassidy of Fall River, Mass.; and Bishop Ralph Hayes of Pittsburgh, Pa., rector of the American college in Rome.

The vast basilica of St. Peter's, one of the largest churches in the world, was sumptuously decorated in hangings of red and gold for the ceremony.

There, just one month ago, Pope Pius XI would have celebrated the 17th anniversary of his reign had he not died two days before, on February 10.

The canopied throne was set on the balcony over the central doors of the great mother church of Catholicism while in the 15-acre plaza of St. Peter's rows of wooden railings were set up to separate the crowds into orderly sections.

but at his suggestion sympathizers of his group picketed the refrigerator car of the Growers' and Shippers' Co-operative union with placards bearing such legends as "ship union, this is a scab," and "this is a scab car." There was no attempt to prevent the loading of berries.

"Let 'em stay there for the time being," Morrison told his following. "We're not through yet by a long shot. When the time comes you'll be told what to do."

Members of the association led by Morrison stopped be.. / trucks as they came to town today and asked the drivers to unload at the Protective union's refrigerator car.

The growers and shippers cooperative is headed by Marion T. Fannaly, long one of the berry belt's leading shippers.

Loading of one of his refrigerator cars was completed late today and work began on loading another car of the rival union.

Loaded cars, with 736 crates constituting a carload, are hooked to a train and sold at auction while en route to market. Morrison said he would conduct an auction at nearby Hammond in competition with the three auctions there which have handled the berry crops for years.

by such writers of Dewey's availability for highest party honors in 1940 was indicated.

It impressed Washington political observers that party leaders from both up and down state New York participated in the Washington pilgrimage. Kenneth Simpson, national committeeman from New York, and Ed Jaeckle of Buffalo, a powerful figure in upstate Republican circles, were reported agreed that Dewey was a coming man politically and destined to attract national attention increasingly between now and the 1940 campaigning.

Across the party line, events are happening at an increasing tempo in Washington to focus national attention on another transplanted mid-westerner for possible 1940 Democratic presidential consideration. He is Iowa-born Commerce Secretary Harry L. Hopkins, who put in most of his public service career in New York before coming to Washington with the New Deal in 1933.

Rated President Roosevelt's most trusted lieutenant, Secretary Hopkins is the key man in the administration's new drive for recovery and cooperation with business. Whether he has political ambitions or is marked for Roosevelt favor in 1940, nobody knows; but the circumstances of his first speech as a cabinet officer, delivered in Des Moines, Ia., strongly suggest that he will be put forward as a favorite son of his native state, not as an adopted son of New York, if he figures in Democratic presidential nomination maneuvering next year.

There is no close parallel in American political history for what appears at least possible, a Dewey-Hopkins race for president in 1940. It is far too soon for either boom to be predictable. That they are talked about stresses the expectation of most political analysts that the middle western vote will decide the course of events.

...CONFERENCE

...Rabbi, Catholic Priest ... Protestant Minister Speakers

...Monroe, La., March 11.—(Special) ... a gathering such as this ..."

...was an observation of Dr. F. K. ... rabbi of the B'nai Israel tem... Monroe, who was one of the ... at the fifth annual education ...ference at Louisiana Tech today, ... drew an attendance of about ... educators and religious leaders.

"Religion Looks at Education" was the theme of the meeting, and a Jewish rabbi, a Catholic priest and a Protestant minister discussed their beliefs freely in a panel discussion led by H. L. Campbell, Lincoln parish superintendent of schools.

"We look to education to solve some of the differences of opinions that exist today," Rabbi Hirsch said. "Imagine a gathering such as this in Germany, where members of different religious faiths could meet together peacefully and 'rub intellectual elbows.'"

Speaking on education among the Jewish people, Dr. Hirsch traced the history and methods of the educational system as practiced in the Jewish family from early times to the present.

"The synagogue was a place of learning as well as a place for worship," he said. "The priests of my faith were, first of all, students and doctors of the Jewish law. They later became preachers."

The Rev. Father Harold A. Gaudin, president of Loyola university, New Orleans, representing the Catholic faith, classified people into three groups—those who believe in religion, those who are neutral toward it, and those who are "against" it.

"Educators should respect the rights of parents," Dr. Gaudin stated. "Academic freedom does not mean the destroying of religion in an immature person. It does not mean the warping of opinions of the pupils to believe as the instructor believes. A child is a sacred trust. His religion is a sacred trust which should be guarded carefully by those entrusted with it. That can be accomplished best, I believe, by giving religion a place in the schools."

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church of Ruston, presenting the Protestant view at the conference, said that "those who teach should have great souls, should be persons who know God as a supreme ... political set-up of the state or nation control the schools, and the striving only for intellectual efficiency."

C. OF C. GROUPS SUBMIT REPORTS

Senior Board Discusses Budget, Flood Control, Trade School Projects

The senior board of the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe met Friday afternoon when reports were received from the various committees. President A. O. Evans presided.

The budget committee report was rendered by Sam Davis and was adopted by the group. The budget will give the organization approximately $12,000 for the coming year's program.

Secretary George D. Holland briefly outlined the flood control and navigation program which is desired to have perfected by the federal government, comprising the creation of reservoirs on headwaters of the Ouachita river and a nine-foot channel as far up on the stream as Camden, Ark.

Sig Masur presented the report on Northeast Center, stating that the committee will meet with T. H. Harris, state superintendent of education, and with James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State university, this week. Efforts will be exerted to have a trade school established at Northeast Center and also to have five or six buses purchased to convey students to and from outlying districts to the college daily. With bus facilities it is said that a total of 750 students can be accommodated.

Berny Oakland reported that progress is being made in the proposed enlargement of Selman airport. Additional acreage is being sought to enable lengthened runways made necessary by the use of large airplanes. Negotiations are in progress, Mr. Oakland said, with owners of land adjacent to the airport looking to the purchase of additional property.

A review of the junior board activities and of the publicity program of the United States Chamber of Commerce, were outlined by Secretary Holland.

Seven Thousandth Installation Made Thursday In Home Of Dr. C. B. Flinn

The 7,000th telephone for the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company was installed last Thursday in the residence of Dr. C. B. Flinn, 300 Rochelle avenue. The installation was made by J. H. Mallery, member of the mechanical staff of the local company.

The picture herewith shows Dr. Flinn seated at the newly-installed phone and Mr. Mallery standing nearby.

The installation of this telephone made history for the company here as it was 570 phones more than Monroe has ever had even at the peak times immediately preceding the depression in the spring of 1930 when there were 6,430 telephones in use here.

During the depression, the number of phones declined to 5,017. This new phone marks a gain of 1,983 phones since the depression.

Telephone service is regarded as a barometer of business and with the new high record of installations and with an increasing volume of long distance calls, there is every indication, stated J. W. Warren, group manager, that better times are here.

RUBINOFF TO USE $100,000 VIOLIN

Audience Here Will Hear Limpid Tones Of Matchless Instrument

When Rubinoff, radio's dynamic maestro, plays here March 31 at the Neville High school auditorium, his audience will hear the liquid, limpid tones of a matchless instrument in the hands of a master, for Rubinoff will be using his $100,000 Stradivarius.

Buying the Strad was, for Rubinoff, the satisfaction of a lifelong ambition. To him it is as definite a symbol of progress as the public acclaim he receives or the dazzling offers from theatrical producers and radio sponsors.

Rubinoff took his first lesson on the violin at the age of five at the home of his birthplace, in Russia. The local music master recognized his talent, offered to give him free lessons. His first violin cost in Russian rubles the equivalent of $1.75.

Four years of study won the youthful prodigy a scholarship at the Royal conservatory at Warsaw. Later he studied in Berlin and Vienna and came to the United States when 14 years old. In 1916, he became affiliated with a mid-western theater circuit as an orchestra conductor. Even at that early date his vital personality enabled him to inspire an orchestra as only genius can do. He clicked with the public and became soloist, touring theaters as a headline attraction.

New York called him and he was offered the baton at the Paramount theater. His unusual arrangements and his dynamic music made him an outstanding favorite of Broadway's music lovers. He stayed there for five years, and not even blase New Yorkers could help applauding the brilliant, sparkling, vigorous, always new music that he seemed to draw from the orchestra with his fingertips.

Rudy Vallee introduced him to radio. He was signed after his first audition, to a contract which ran for three consecutive years. Following that he was featured on other radio programs for many years.

His present tour is his first in more than seven years, and for the first time brings him in contact with many of his radio admirers.

HIRSCH ADDRESSES TECH CONFERENCE

Jewish Rabbi, Catholic Priest And Protestant Minister Speakers

RUSTON, La., March 11.—(Special)—"Imagine a gathering such as this in Germany!"

That was an observation of Dr. F. K. Hirsch, rabbi of the B'nai Israel temple of Monroe, who was one of the speakers at the fifth annual education conference at Louisiana Tech today, which drew an attendance of about 200 educators and religious leaders.

"Religion Looks at Education" was the theme of the meeting, and a Jewish rabbi, a Catholic priest and a Protestant minister discussed their beliefs freely in a panel discussion led by H. L. Campbell, Lincoln parish superintendent of schools.

"We look to education to solve some of the differences of opinions that exist today," Rabbi Hirsch said. "Imagine a gathering such as this in Germany, where members of different religious faiths could meet together peacefully and 'rub intellectual elbows.'"

Speaking on education among the Jewish people, Dr. Hirsch traced the history and methods of the educational system as practiced in the Jewish family from early times to the present.

"The synagogue was a place of learning as well as a place for worship," he said. "The priests of my faith were, first of all, students and doctors of the Jewish law. They later became preachers."

The Rev. Father Harold A. Gaudin, president of Loyola university, New Orleans, representing the Catholic faith, classified people into three groups—those who believe in religion, those who are neutral toward it, and those who are "against" it.

"Educators should respect the rights of parents," Dr. Gaudin stated. "Academic freedom does not mean the destroying of religion in an immature person. It does not mean the warping of opinions of the pupils to believe as the instructor believes. A child is a sacred trust. His religion is a sacred trust which should be guarded carefully by those entrusted with it. That can be accomplished best, I believe, by giving religion a place in the schools."

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church of Ruston, presenting the Protestant view at the conference, said that "those who teach should have great souls, should be persons who know God as a supreme being, as well as be persons of intellectual ability."

The Methodist minister warned education against the "dangers of standardizing education, where every child is graded by set standards; taking the classics out of education; letting the political set-up of the state or nation control the schools, and the striving only for intellectual efficiency."

C. OF C. GROUPS SUBMIT REPORTS

Senior Board Discusses Budget, Flood Control, Trade School Projects

The senior board of the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe met Friday afternoon when reports were received from the various committees. President A. O. Evans presided.

The budget committee report was rendered by Sam Davis and was adopted by the group. The budget will give the organization approximately $12,000 for the coming year's program.

Secretary George D. Holland briefly outlined the flood control and navigation program which is desired to have perfected by the federal government, comprising the creation of reservoirs on headwaters of the Ouachita river and a nine-foot channel as far up on the stream as Camden, Ark.

Sig Masur presented the report on Northeast Center, stating that the committee will meet with T. H. Harris, state superintendent of education, and with James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State university, this week. Efforts will be exerted to have a trade school established at Northeast Center and also to have five or six buses purchased to convey students to and from outlying districts to the college daily. With bus facilities it is said that a total of 750 students can be accommodated.

Berny Oakland reported that progress is being made in the proposed enlargement of Selman airport. Additional acreage is being sought to enable lengthened runways made necessary by the use of large airplanes. Negotiations are in progress, Mr. Oakland said, with owners of land adjacent to the airport looking to the purchase of additional property.

A review of the junior board activities and of the publicity program of the United States Chamber of Commerce, were outlined by Secretary Holland.

Auroral "curtains" are the strangest and most impressive of all the forms of northern and southern lights.

Buying the Strad was, for Rubinoff, the satisfaction of a lifelong ambition. To him it is as definite a symbol of progress as the public acclaim he receives or the dazzling offers from theatrical producers and radio sponsors.

Rubinoff took his first lesson on the violin at the age of five at the home of his birthplace, in Russia. The local music master recognized his talent, offered to give him free lessons. His first violin cost in Russian rubles the equivalent of $1.75.

Four years of study won the youthful prodigy a scholarship at the Royal conservatory at Warsaw. Later he studied in Berlin and Vienna and came to the United States when 14 years old. In 1916, he became affiliated with a mid-western theater circuit as an orchestra conductor. Even at that early date his vital personality enabled him to inspire an orchestra as only genius can do. He clicked with the public and became soloist, touring theaters as a headline attraction.

New York called him and he was offered the baton at the Paramount theater. His unusual arrangements and his dynamic music made him an outstanding favorite of Broadway's music lovers. He stayed there for five years, and not even blase New Yorkers could help applauding the brilliant, sparkling, vigorous, always new music that he seemed to draw from the orchestra with his fingertips.

Rudy Vallee introduced him to radio. He was signed after his first audition, to a contract which ran for three consecutive years. Following that he was featured on other radio programs for many years.

His present tour is his first in more than seven years, and for the first time brings him in contact with many of his radio admirers.

Garden Begin Bursting Into Bloom As Early Spring Days Arrive

Hatch Home Of Great Interest

Residence Is Treasure House Of Antiques; Mrs. Bennett Also Has Prized Heirlooms

THE AMBITION we all share with our neighbors these first days of early spring is to get out of doors where some of nature's peace can flow into us as sunshine into rooms and where the fresh wind can drive away the heaviness of winter. Cares drop away in gardens where everything is upward striving and beauty can be had for the seeking. No time is ever set on the lavish springtime.

Monroe motorists do not have to look far for beauty. It is found in every garden, along every bayou and every country lane. Motoring along the banks of Boeuf river, visiting the old plantation homes, acts like a tonic on even the most jaded city dweller.

We now understand why Margaret Dalcney hurries home for the week-end, after a busy week in town. Around the bend in the river one finds the old Hatch home with its solid walnut furnishings, open hallways, spacious fireplaces and the original foundation of bricks, made on the place by the slaves before the Civil war. Nearby one finds the Frank Hatch home with a crystal clear brook flowing peacefully through the old fashioned garden where lilies lift their faces to the sun and gold fish skim the surface. Just to stand on the rustic bridge and look down into the clear water is enough to clear away the mental cobwebs that have been collecting all winter.

Across the river, down a rustic l: e bordered with cherry laurel and redbud, now in full bloom, one finds the "Mac" Hatch. The old home is a veritable treasure trove insofar as lovely, priceless antiques are concerned. One thing in particular which we admired was a pair of white porcelain hands, palms upward, and dating back to the year 1828. They are always kept on a marble top table. Mr. Hatch has in his possession a pair of spectacles he prizes highly. They are very small, gold ones, octagon shaped, with adjustable ear pieces. They belonged to his great grandmother.

"Aunt Sue" Hatch, as she is lovingly called by young and old, loves to lift the thin, gossamer veil that separates today from yesterday. Everything she possesses is surrounded with glamour. Her handsome mahogany four poster, canopy bed belonged to her grandmother. Her hand-made silver spoons are more than a century old. A miniature of her grandmother, Anna Eliza Noble, and handsome daguerreotypes of other members of the family are brought out when visitors express a desire to see them.

There was still the Richards Hatchs to see but an afternoon is all too short to visit with these delightfully charming people who, living in the midst of their beautiful possessions, have managed to keep alive throu- these changing times the spark of gracious living associated with this particular section of the old south.

Speaking of prized possessions brings to mind an afternoon spent with Nancy Bennett. (Mrs. Fred Bennett.) Discussing an article on "Samplers Tell a Story," appearing recently in the American Home magazine, Nancy modestly brought forth a sampler made by her great-grandmother, Grace McIlrath Ellis, who wrote the magazine article, said, "If you have a sampler, study it with your heart as well as your eyes." Remembering her words, we studied closely Nancy Bennett's sampler and was surprised to find how absorbing were the letters, the colors and the figures. We marveled at the dexterity of the stitches and the lines which read—"Wrought by Rebecca H. Meyer in the year 1832. Modesty is an essential ornament to you." Samplers, as we all know, were made by ladies whose freedom from domestic responsibilities left time for the practice of the one art considered suitable for feminine fingers. Nancy has many lovely old things in her possession. A quilt two hundred years old still retains its beautiful colors. It is made of homespun squares and is quilted in the rose design with stiches so small they are almost invisible to the naked eye. A dozen pure coin spoons are valuable possessions, also a large family Bible, (an original King James version) and a violin that is more than a hundred years old.

These spring days are busy ones for Amos and Frances Smelser. They are managing their own plantation, Glendora, and spend their waking hours consorting with Mother Nature. They come home late in the evening in their station wagon, weary, and of course ravenously hungry. Frances is most becomingly tanned and has that fresh, lovely look about her that all people acquire who get down on their knees and dig in the good earth. The bridge table fades into significance when there is such work to do and at the setting of the sun finds noble work well done.

Mrs. Robert Will Talk At D. A. R. Meet

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be the principal speaker at the state conference in Alexandria, March 14 and 15.

Mrs. Robert, a brilliant speaker on the subject of "Educational Defenses," said recently: "The American people are awakening to a realization of the benefits of a free democracy and to the necessity of safegdarding and nurturing that system, if it is to be enjoyed in the future."

The president general stated, however, that patriotic leaders must continue, and even redouble their efforts to encourage this trend. The only method of accomplishing this, she said, is by an unflagging effort to educate the rank and file of American citizenry on the blessing of Americanism, and to instill an appreciation of the comparative benefits and freedom of the American way of life as contrasted with alien ways. She declared:

"A public opinion indifferent to truth falls easy prey to a propaganda of promises, popular in appeal, though impossible of achievement. Perhaps democracy's greatest threat is a people ignorant of facts. There is no justifiable reason why the conservative does not think as clearly as the radical."

Mrs. Robert declared that a revival of Americanism is "the greatest need of the country today." She added:

"One reason for the rapidity and completeness of the growth of the political systems that would now supplant ours, is the fact that there was immediately placed in the hands of children and youth simple statements of reasons why the new system was believed to be better."

She said the United States wants no government control of education and "never a minister of propaganda." She stated, however, that a constructive attack on this problem is essential to the future well being of American philosophy.

Discussing the comparative values of the American way, compared with alien philosophies, Mrs. Robert added:

"The greatest defense against un-American activities today is the education of every citizen in the knowledge of what Americanism means to him. Examination of conditions of life in many countries show that the American people have for years enjoyed more advantage than can be obtained under other systems through years to come."

She pointed out that in Russia it requires four hours for a worker to earn the same amount of bread that the American worker earn in one hour, and eight times as long to earn the same amount of butter. In order to buy a pound of coffee, she said, the worker in Russia or Italy must work twenty times as long as the American workman.

She declared:

"Does it mean anything to Americans that even in years of depression in proprtion to population, America has more automobiles, more telephones, more radios, more doctors, more college educations, a lower death rate for infants, that there is a savings account for every third person and an insurance policy for half of them? What has a way of life through other systems of government to offer America?"

Again emphasizing the necessity of educating American youth, the president general stated:

"Democracy is overlooking the problem of its youth. Hundreds of thousands come to maturity with the feeling that America offers them no secure place in its scheme of life. Unrest, general dissatisfaction, and an open ear for propaganda result.

"Lessened emphasis upon religion, the belittleing of heroic qualities of past leaders, the overthrow of tradition, without substitute moral or ethical control, has created widespread distrust and skepticism, with a resulting disregard of or disrespect for law."

Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Carroll of Columbia announce the arrival of a son at St. Francis sanitarium, March 6. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cosper of this city, are the maternal grandparents. Mrs. Carroll was formerly Miss Elizabeth Cosper.

Opera Club Holds Meeting

Mrs. Paul Newman, president of the Opera club, entertained members Thursday morning with Mrs. S. O. Grubbs assisting in extending many courtesies.

Mrs. Henry Hinkle gave a short talk on the life of Verdi, the composer selected for the lesson, and reviewed in most interesting manner the story of the opera "La Traviata." Commenting on its first appearance in Venice March 6, 1853, it was said to be a complete failure for two reasons—the incapacity of the performers and the costumes. In the first performance the leading lady was so fat and healthy looking that in the final scene when she was to tell her lover that she was dying of consumption, everyone laughed so much that the concluding arias were never sung. The next year, however, Verdi again presented "La Traviata," and this time it was a great success. The story, based on the drama of Alexander Dumas' "Dame Aux Camilles," was a theme not usually used by Verdi. It contains passages of charming grace and tenderness.

Mrs. V. S. Garnett, leader for the round table discussion, ably traced the five points of interest in the opera, introduction of characters, plot movement, climax, resolution of plot and the end. Selections from the opera were sung by Mrs. C. W. Oseland, Mrs. Marvyn Johnson, Mrs. Paul Newman, with Mrs. Charles Bennett accompanist.

At the conclusion of the program the hostesses served delicious refreshments to Mrs. W. C. Scott, Mrs. J. S. Kramer, Mrs. Elliott Thompson, Mrs. E. R. Whitaker, Mrs. Warren Gregory, Mrs. L. V. Tarver, Mrs. Henry Hinkle, Mrs. B. B. Martin, Mrs. V. S. Garnett, Mrs. Charles Bennett, Mrs. C. W. Oseland and Mrs. Marvyn Johnson.

The beautiful cover of the L. S. U. Alumni News will be of especial interest to friends of Miss Georgianna Williams, who formerly resided in Monroe. The picture, representing "Manon" in Massenet's opera, selected this year for the production of the opera department of L. S. U., was posed by Miss Williams.

Miss Williams, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Williams, graduated from the Neville High school and is now a student at the university.

The story of Manon has special appeal to Louisiana, since it was to a Louisiana penal colony that the unfortunate girl, in one version of the tale, was transported, and in New Orleans that she is believed to have been buried.

Mrs. J. Leon Dennis, Mrs. D. D Dudley, Mrs. Sam Browning, Mrs. Dan Bivins and Mrs. G. L. Morgan have returned from a most enjoyable trip, motoring to Mobile, Ala., along the azalea trail, where they visited the Bellingrath gardens, and returning by way of New Orleans. Points of interest visited en route home were the Jungle garden, Avery island, the salt mines, Oakland manor, Evangeline oak and Belmont. At Belmont, one of Louisiana's famous ante-bellum homes, they were the guests of Mrs. Wyche. Returning through the Teche country, they reached Monroe Thursday evening.

Miss Clara Virginia Terzia, who is visiting her cousin, Henry W. Hays, and Miss Virginia Payton, students at Ole Miss, Oxford, Miss., have been enjoying the early spring festivities which have been given this week at the university. Friday evening Miss Terzia attended the military ball, at which the governor of Mississippi was a guest. On Saturday evening, Miss Terzia was a guest at a fraternity dance. She is planning to return to Monroe the early part of the week.

Mr. W. J. Tyler, who recently underwent a serious operation at St. Francis sanitarium, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home, 204 Breard street, and friends will now be permitted to call.

Mrs. W. L. Close, who has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Keller, has returned to her home in Alexandria.

Mrs. Brock Lewis of West Monroe is leaving for Beaumont, Tex., where she will make her home in the future.

Mr. F. A. Bertin of Baton Rouge is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Vance Rhodes ,and Mr. Rhodes.

McGuire Club Scene Of Bridge-Luncheon

Mrs. T. T. Howe, Mrs. J. W. Whitfield And Mrs. Ed Watkins Are Hostesses For Occasion

Prominent among the affairs of the week was the bi-monthly bridge-luncheon at the McGuire Golf club Thursday. Oblong pottery bowls filled with pansies centering the luncheon table contributed an interesting note of color to the affair. Place cards carrying out the St. Patrick's color theme were also used.

Enjoying this delightful affair were Mrs. W. J. Riley, Mrs. H. A. McDonald, Mrs. Ed Ebert, Mrs. James McKenzie, Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, Mrs. T. T. Howe, Mrs. J. E. Whitfield, Mrs Frank Johnston, Mrs. H. S. Spencer, Mrs. Sam Wilder, Mrs. Paul Matthews, Mrs. W. C. Feazel, Mrs. Broc Day, Mrs. O. W. Getchell, Mrs. G. B. Watkins, Mrs. Vance Rhodes, Mrs. W. R. Hubner, Mrs. L. R. Simpson, Mrs. Warren Taylor, Mrs. Bunn Beasley, Mrs. John Jordan, Mrs. A. L. Harrington, Mrs. Jake Bullen, Sr., Mrs. Jake Bullen, Jr., Mrs. Margaret Bartram, Mrs. Bradley Waelder, Mrs. William Bendel, Mrs. Joseph Brown, Mrs. H. F. Madison, Mrs. Walter Moss, Mrs. Tom Munholland, Mrs. O. A. Evans, Mrs. W. C. Fisher, Mrs. Julius Chandler, Mrs. R. B. Henry and Miss Ivo Wilson.

Hostesses were Mrs. T. T. Howe, Mrs. J. W. Whitfield and Mrs. Ed Watkins.

Art Association Names Officers

Officers for 1939-1940 were elected by the Monroe Art association last week, naming Mrs. Joseph A. Winkler, Jr., president, Mrs. Lewis Slater, vice-president, Mrs. M. R. Hausherr, secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, reporter.

Standing committees named were: Program committee, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, Mrs. H. M. James, Mrs. C. C. Colvert; membership committee, Mrs. Fred Thatcher, Mrs. Rene R. McCord, Jr., Mrs. M. R. Hausherr; exhibition committee, Miss Mary Bergevin, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, Mrs. H. M. James and Mrs. Armstrong.

After the election of officers, Mrs. Saenger addressed the members on "Color as Applied to Art." She said in part:

"Color has invaded our homes and run riot in our kitchens and bathrooms. Brightly colored pots and pans, dish towels, curtains and furniture make of the modern kitchen a cheerful room of beauty that would contrast strangely with the kitchen our mothers used to have.

"In planning room color schemes we consider the location and amount of light. In a north room, warm colors should predominate, and a room with southern or western exposure would seem less hot and bright if we used cool colors.

"We may achieve rhythm of color in a room by our arrangement of pictures and furniture in relation to the drapery colors. Each color in your color scheme should have a repetition in the room. If we use a dull rich blue in the upholstering of the chairs, we should echo it in the pictures, rugs or curtains. Large masses of colors should have small echoes for accents.

"Some colors produce quiet and restful effects while others are flamboyant and exciting.

"Variety or richness, and harmony add greatly to 'quality' in color. Numbers of tints and hues may be combined to give variety if they are well organized.

"In a costume, in a room or in a painting, our aim is a 'symphony' of color, in which the direct sensuous appeal is enormously heightened by the sense of the relation between the colors employed, with each color setting off or being complimented by all the others.

"Richness in color is not the same as brightness. Colors that are bright without being rich or deep give an effect of garishness or gaudiness."

Of interest to a wide circle of friends will be the announcement of the marriage of Miss Velma LaVerne Dishercon to Mr. P. J. Petch, both of Monroe, at the residence of Rev. I. L. Yeager, at 4413 Jackson street, Friday evening, March 10, at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Petch, after a few days' visit in south Louisiana, will be at home to their friends at 603 Jackson street.

Monroe Gardens Begin Bursting Into Bloom As Early Spring Days Arrive

Ancient Hatch Home Of Great Interest

Old Residence Is Treasure House Of Antiques; Mrs. Bennett Also Has Prized Heirlooms

THE AMBITION we all share with our neighbors these first days of early spring is to get out of doors where some of nature's peace can flow into us as sunshine into trees and where the fresh wind can drive away the heaviness of winter. Cares drop away in gardens where everything is upward striving and beauty can be had for the seeking. No price is ever set on the lavish springtime.

Monroe motorists do not have to seek far for beauty. It is found in every garden, along every bayou and every country lane. Motoring along the banks of Boeuf river, visiting the old plantation homes, acts like a tonic for even the most jaded city dweller.

We now understand why Margaret Hatch Delonely hurries home for the week-end, after a busy week in town. Around the bend in the river one finds the old Hatch home with its solid walnut furnishings, open hallways, spacious fireplaces and the original foundation of bricks, made on the place by the slaves before the Civil war. Nearby one finds the Frank Hatch home with a crystal clear brook flowing peacefully through the old fashioned garden where lilies lift their faces to the sun and gold fish skim the surface. Just to stand on the rustic bridge and look down into the clear water is enough to clear away the mental cobwebs that have been collecting all winter.

Across the river, down a rustic lane bordered with cherry laurel and redbud, now in full bloom, one finds the "Mac" Hatch. The old home is a veritable treasure trove insofar as lovely, priceless antiques are concerned. One thing in particular which we admired was a pair of white porcelain hands, palms upward, and dating back to the year 1828. They are always kept on a marble top table. Mr. Hatch has in his possession a pair of spectacles he prizes highly. They are very small, gold ones, octagon shaped, with adjustable ear pieces. They belonged to his great grandmother.

"Aunt Sue" Hatch, as she is lovingly called by young and old, loves to lift the thin, gossamer veil that separates today from yesterday. Everything she possesses is surrounded with glamour. Her handsome mahogany four poster, canopy bed belonged to her grandmother. Her hand-made silver spoons are more than a century old. A miniature of her grandmother, Anna Eliza Noble, and handsome daguerreotypes of other members of the family are brought out when visitors express a desire to see them.

There was still the Richards Hatchs to see but an afternoon is all too short to visit with these delightfully charming people who, living in the midst of their beautiful possessions, have managed to keep alive through these changing times the spark of gracious living associated with this particular section of the old south.

Speaking of prized possessions brings to mind an afternoon spent with Nancy Bennett. (Mrs. Fred Bennett.) Discussing an article on "Samplers Tell a Story," appearing recently in the American Home magazine, Nancy modestly brought forth a sampler made by her great-grandmother, Grace McIlrath Ellis, who wrote the magazine article, said, "If you have a sampler, study it with your heart as well as your eyes." Remembering her words, we studied closely Nancy Bennett's sampler and was surprised to find how absorbing were the letters, the colors and the figures. We marveled at the dexterity of the stitches and the lines which read—"Wrought by Rebecca H. Meyer in the year 1832. Modesty is an essential ornament to you." Samplers, as we all know, were made by ladies whose freedom from domestic responsibilities left time for the practice of the one art considered suitable for feminine fingers. Nancy has many lovely old things in her possession. A quilt two hundred years old still retains its beautiful colors. It is made of homespun squares and is quilted in the rose design with stiches so small they are almost invisible to the naked eye. A dozen pure coin spoons are valuable possessions, also a large family Bible, (an original King James version) and a violin that is more than a hundred years old.

These spring days are busy ones for Amos and Frances Smelser. They are managing their own plantation, Glendora, and spend their waking hours consorting with Mother Nature. They come home late in the evening in their station wagon, weary, and of course ravenously hungry. Frances is most becomingly tanned and has that fresh, lovely look about her that all people acquire who get down on their knees and dig in the good earth. The bridge table fades into significance when there is such work to do and at the setting of the sun finds noble work well done.

Mrs. Robert Will Talk At D. A. R. Meet

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, Jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be the principal speaker at the state conference in Alexandria, March 14 and 15.

Mrs. Robert, a brilliant speaker on the subject of "Educational Defenses," said recently: "The American people are awakening to a realization of the benefits of a free democracy and to the necessity of safeguarding and nurturing that system, if it is to be enjoyed in the future."

The president general stated, however, that patriotic leaders must continue, and even redouble their efforts to encourage this trend. The only method of accomplishing this, she said, is by an unflagging effort to educate the rank and file of American citizenry on the blessing of Americanism, and to instill an appreciation of the comparative benefits and freedom of the American way of life as contrasted with alien ways. She declared:

"A public opinion indifferent to truth falls easy prey to a propaganda of promises, popular in appeal, though impossible of achievement. Perhaps democracy's greatest threat is a people ignorant of facts. There is no justifiable reason why the conservative does not think as clearly as the radical."

Mrs. Robert declared that a revival of Americanism is "the greatest need of the country today." She added:

"One reason for the rapidity and completeness of the growth of the political systems that would now supplant ours, is the fact that there was immediately placed in the hands of children and youth simple statements of reasons why the new system was believed to be better."

She said the United States wants no government control of education and "never a minister of propaganda." She stated, however, that a constructive attack on this problem is essential to the future well being of American philosophy.

Discussing the comparative values of the American way, compared with alien philosophies, Mrs. Robert added:

"The greatest defense against un-American activities today is the education of every citizen in the knowledge of what Americanism means to him. Examination of conditions of life in many countries show that the American people have for years enjoyed more advantage than can be obtained under other systems through years to come."

She pointed out that in Russia it requires four hours for a worker to earn the same amount of bread that the American worker earn in one hour, and eight times as long to earn the same amount of butter. In order to buy a pound of coffee, she said, the worker in Russia or Italy must work twenty times as long as the American workman.

She declared:

"Does it mean anything to Americans that even in years of depression in proprtion to population, America has more automobiles, more telephones, more radios, more doctors, more college educations, a lower death rate for infants, that there is a savings account for every third person and an insurance policy for half of them? What has a way of life through other systems of government to offer America?"

Again emphasizing the necessity of educating American youth, the president general stated:

"Democracy is overlooking the problem of its youth. Hundreds of thousands come to maturity with the feeling that America offers them no secure place in its scheme of life. Unrest, general dissatisfaction, and an open ear for propaganda result.

"Lessened emphasis upon religion, the belittleing of heroic qualities of past leaders, the overthrow of tradition, without substitute moral or ethical control, has created widespread distrust and skepticism, with a resulting disregard of or disrespect for law."

Opera Club Holds Meeting

Mrs. Paul Newman, president of the Opera club, entertained members Thursday morning with Mrs. S. O. Grubbs assisting in extending many courtesies.

Mrs. Henry Hinkle gave a short talk on the life of Verdi, the composer selected for the lesson, and reviewed in most interesting manner the story of the opera "La Traviata." Commenting on its first appearance in Venice March 6, 1853, it was said to be a complete failure for two reasons—the incapacity of the performers and the costumes. In the first performance the leading lady was so fat and healthy looking that in the final scene when she was to tell her lover that she was dying of consumption, everyone laughed so much that the concluding arias were never sung. The next year, however, Verdi again presented "La Traviata," and this time it was a great success. The story, based on the drama of Alexander Dumas' "Dame Aux Camilles," was a theme not usually used by Verdi. It contains passages of charming grace and tenderness.

Mrs. V. S. Garnett, leader for the round table discussion, ably traced the five points of interest in the opera, introduction of characters, plot movement, climax, resolution of plot and the end. Selections from the opera were sung by Mrs. C. W. Oseland, Mrs. Marvyn Johnson, Mrs. Paul Newman, with Mrs. Charles Bennett accompanist.

At the conclusion of the program the hostesses served delicious refreshments to Mrs. W. C. Scott, Mrs. J. S. Kramer, Mrs. Elliott Thompson, Mrs. E. R. Whitaker, Mrs. Warren Gregory, Mrs. L. V. Tarver, Mrs. Henry Hinkle, Mrs. B. B. Martin, Mrs. V. S. Garnett, Mrs. Charles Bennett, Mrs. C. W. Oseland and Mrs. Marvyn Johnson.

The beautiful cover of the L. S. U. Alumni News will be of especial interest to friends of Miss Georgianna Williams, who formerly resided in Monroe. The picture, representing "Manon" in Massenet's opera, selected this year for the production of the opera department of L. S. U., was posed by Miss Williams.

Miss Williams, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Williams, graduated from the Neville High school and is now a student at the university.

The story of Manon has special appeal to Louisiana, since it was to a Louisiana penal colony that the unfortunate girl, in one version of the tale, was transported, and in New Orleans that she is believed to have been buried.

Mrs. J. Leon Dennis, Mrs. D. D. Dudley, Mrs. Sam Browning, Mrs. Dan Bivins and Mrs. G. L. Morgan have returned from a most enjoyable trip, motoring to Mobile, Ala., along the azalea trail, where they visited the Bellingrath gardens, and returning by way of New Orleans. Points of interest visited en route home were the Jungle garden, Avery island, the salt mines, Oakland manor, Evangeline oak and Belmont. At Belmont, one of Louisiana's famous ante-bellum homes, they were the guests of Mrs. Wyche. Returning through the Teche country, they reached Monroe Thursday evening.

Miss Clara Virginia Terzia, who is visiting her cousin, Henry W. Hays, and Miss Virginia Payton, students at Ole Miss, Oxford, Miss., have been enjoying the early spring festivities which have been given this week at the university. Friday evening Miss Terzia attended the military ball, at which the governor of Mississippi was a guest. On Saturday evening, Miss Terzia was a guest at a fraternity dance. She is planning to return to Monroe the early part of the week.

Mr. W. J. Tyler, who recently underwent a serious operation at St. Francis sanitarium, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home, 204 Breard street, and friends will now be permitted to call.

Mrs. W. L. Close, who has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Keller, has returned to her home in Alexandria.

Mrs. Brock Lewis of West Monroe is leaving for Beaumont, Tex., where she will make her home in the future.

Mr. F. A. Bertin of Baton Rouge is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Vance Rhodes ,and Mr. Rhodes.

Mrs. T. T. Howe, Mrs. J. W. Whitfield And Mrs. Ed Watkins Are Hostesses For Occasion

Prominent among the affairs of the week was the bi-monthly bridge-luncheon at the McGuire Golf club Thursday. Oblong pottery bowls filled with pansies centering the luncheon table contributed an interesting note of color to the affair. Place cards carrying out the St. Patrick's color theme were also used.

Enjoying this delightful affair were Mrs. W. J. Riley, Mrs. H. A. McDonald, Mrs. Ed Ebert, Mrs. James McKenzie, Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, Mrs. T. T. Howe, Mrs. J. E. Whitfield, Mrs. Frank Johnston, Mrs. H. S. Spencer, Mrs. Sam Wilder, Mrs. Paul Matthews, Mrs. W. C. Feazel, Mrs. Broc Day, Mrs. O. W. Getchell, Mrs. G. B. Watkins, Mrs. Vance Rhodes, Mrs. W. R. Hubner, Mrs. L. R. Simpson, Mrs. Warren Taylor, Mrs. Bunn Beasley, Mrs. John Jordan, Mrs. A. L. Harrington, Mrs. Jake Bullen, Sr., Mrs. Jake Bullen, Jr., Mrs. Margaret Bartram, Mrs. Bradley Waelder, Mrs. William Bendel, Mrs. Joseph Brown, Mrs. H. F. Madison, Mrs. Walter Moss, Mrs. Tom Munholland, Mrs. O. A. Evans, Mrs. W. C. Fisher, Mrs. Julius Chandler, Mrs. R. B. Henry and Miss Ivo Wilson.

Art Association Names Officers

Officers for 1939-1940 were elected by the Monroe Art association last week, naming Mrs. Joseph A. Winkler, Jr., president, Mrs. Lewis Slater, vice-president, Mrs. M. R. Hausherr, secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, reporter.

Standing committees named were: Program committee, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, Mrs. H. M. James, Mrs. C. C. Colvert; membership committee, Mrs. Fred Thatcher, Mrs. Rene R. McCord, Jr., Mrs. M. R. Hausherr; exhibition committee, Miss Mary Bergevin, Mrs. H. R. Saenger, Mrs. H. M. James and Mrs. Armstrong.

After the election of officers, Mrs. Saenger addressed the members on "Color as Applied to Art." She said in part:

"Color has invaded our homes and run riot in our kitchens and bathrooms. Brightly colored pots and pans, dish towels, curtains and furniture make of the modern kitchen a cheerful room of beauty that would contrast strangely with the kitchen our mothers used to have.

"In planning room color schemes we consider the location and amount of light. In a north room, warm colors should predominate, and a room with southern or western exposure would seem less hot and bright if we used cool colors.

"We may achieve rhythm of color in a room by our arrangement of pictures and furniture in relation to the drapery colors. Each color in your color scheme should have a repetition in the room. If we use a dull rich blue in the upholstering of the chairs, we should echo it in the pictures, rugs or curtains. Large masses of colors should have small echoes for accents.

"Some colors produce quiet and restful effects while others are flamboyant and exciting.

"Variety or richness, and harmony add greatly to 'quality' in color. Numbers of tints and hues may be combined to give variety if they are well organized.

"In a costume, in a room or in a painting, our aim is a 'symphony' of color, in which the direct sensuous appeal is enormously heightened by the sense of the relation between the colors employed, with each color setting off or being complimented by all the others.

"Richness in color is not the same as brightness. Colors that are bright without being rich or deep give an effect of garishness or gaudiness."

Of interest to a wide circle of friends will be the announcement of the marriage of Miss Velma LaVerne Disheroon to Mr. P. J. Petch, both of Monroe, at the residence of Rev. I. L. Yeager, at 4413 Jackson street, Friday evening, March 10, at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Petch, after a few days' visit in south Louisiana, will be at home to their friends at 603 Jackson street.

Circle No. 1 of the First Methodist Missionary society will meet with Mrs. Jeff Henderson Tuesday afternoon.

"Health and Recreation" was the theme of the meeting held yesterday by the Fifth District Parent-Teacher association at the Crosley school, West Monroe.

Mr. Eugene Lies, Shreveport, representative of the National Recreation association, made an address on the importance of recreation in the lives of adults. "Play," according to Mr. Lies, "enriches life, as well as helps to glorify it."

Mrs. W. C. Youngblood, Shreveport, state chairman of recreation, spoke on the value of recreation in the community. She urged the associations to encourage and aid all recreational activities, as well as promote backyard playgrounds, family nights, and trips for the recreation of the family.

Mrs. J. B. Best, also of Shreveport, spoke on the importance of checking up on the health of the pre-school children, so that he may enter school physically and mentally fit.

Mrs. Paul Blanchard, Baton Rouge, state president, made a brief address of welcome, outlining the work of the state organization. Mrs. Blanchard pointed out that the Parent-Teacher association has shown remarkable growth during the past decade, adapting its activities to the trend of modern life. Mrs. Blanchard conferred with the convention chairmen last night at the Frances hotel and plans were perfected for the state meeting which will be held in Monroe, April 20, 21, 22. Over six hundred delegates are expected to attend.

Rev. C. Karlos Smith gave the invocation and Mr. G. W. Welch made the address of welcome. The response was made by Mrs. Neal Holt, Tallulah.

A nominating committee was also elected to name candidates for the offices of parish chairman, and secretary and treasurer, to be voted upon at the fall meeting.

An invitation was extended to the Fifth district to hold the fall meeting at the West Side school, Bastrop, which was accepted.

During the luncheon, which was held in the cafeteria of the Crosley school, musical selections were given by members of the Ouachita Parish High school band.

Welcome Branch Book Club Meets

Mrs. V. S. Garnett with Mrs. D. H. Duncan and Mrs. George Phebus co-hostess offered charming hospitality to members of the Welcome Branch club and their guests in her attractive home on North Second street, Wednesday afternoon.

The quotation "The Whole Mystery of Life is in the Forest," was read in unison.

A regional poem "Jim Porter's Shanty Song," was read by Mrs. F. Dean Selig.

Mrs. A. S. Gunter gave a splendid review on "The Great North West." She said in part: "It's that section of our United States of America from the Great Lakes to the Pacific ocean. As the centuries passed men gradually found their way across this continent which so inconveniently blocked the ocean high way. They peopled a wilderness created a commerce and a nation which was then French territory.

"Fort Vancouver became the commercial agricultural and social center of the Oregon country.

"In the spring of 1825 before the buildings of the new fort were completed a sailing vessel from England brought the first of many distinguished guests who were to collect special plants for the Horticulture society of London.

"A celebrated Scotch botanist, David Douglas, introduced over 200 species of American plants and trees into England. He studied, collected and reported many hundreds of the wild flowers. Many grew on the banks of the Snake, the Spokane and the Columbia rivers. These are still blooming in the gardens of England and tall pines whisper there of the Pacific.

"In memory of the great scientific service he rendered a monument was erected to him by the botanists of Europe.

"It is not easy to overestimate the importance of the Lewis and Clark expedition, it revealed to the world a new region in incalcuable resources, prairies, plains, and foot hills which pastured incredible numbers of elk, deer, wild sheep and buffalo. Rich valleys, streams, swarming with living treasures. Here too were the famous mountain men, trappers."

Mrs. M. R. Hausherr gave a piano selection, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock," of this typical Shanty music she said in part:

"The last forty years or so of the Ninteenth century, science, invention, new machinery, radio, and movies, have changed logging camp conditions, so that singing and singers are not what they used to be. The old-time shanty-boy is gone.

"Franz Rickaby walked across the old lumber region, one summer, carrying a violin and packsack, stopping where night found him, playing his violin and asking people, 'What are the old songs you sing here?' And the ballads he picked up were all from old men."

Mrs. John Whitfield gave a splendid review of Stewart Halbrook's book, "Holy Old Mackinaw."

She said:

"It was told of Jigger Jones that when he was a head chopper in the main woods some 50 years ago, he would walk a felled spruce, barefooted, and kick off every knot from bottom to top. He was what loggers meant when they said a rugged man—and he was almost but not quiet indestructable. Jigger was almost the last of his race, who cut a swath of timber from eastern Maine to western Oregon and yelled like crazy devils every spring, when the drive was in.

"Nether exposure nor accident seemed to have the least effect on Jigger and it was only when circumstances forced him out of the logging camps into the ways of civilization, that he took the first step toward the grave.

"Death had been predicted for Jigger in numerous ways but none could have guessed that death would call for his Jigger in a conveyance he wholeheartedly loathed an automobile. Truely enough the country doctor to whom they brought the dying Jigger could hardly believe that a mere automobile accident could lay low such an indestructable fellow."

Members present were: Mrs. Frank Black, Mrs. John C. Best, Mrs. H. C. Collins, Mrs. Harold Deloney, Mrs. C. H. Dunaway, Mrs. D. H. Duncan, Mrs. J. T. Eubanks, Mrs. V. S. 'Always In Trouble' Is Capitol Hit

Jane Withers Heads Cast Of Rollicking Film Starting Today

WHEN the members of the cast supporting Jane Withers in her newest 20th Century-Fox comedy, "Always In Trouble," sought diversion and relaxation between scenes, they invariably turned to reading the European news dispatches in the daily press.

"After working awhile with Miss Mischief," declared Director Joseph Santley, "we see the series of continental crises in a new light—they're not so bad after all! If you want real trouble, just be around when Jane gets going.

"She's always filled with good intentions. She's always trying to help folks out. She's always hoping to square things up. And always—always trouble, trouble, trouble!

"Just look at this new picture, so appropriately named, 'Always In Trouble.' Jane and her family are shipwrecked, marooned on a desert island, threatened by a gang of smugglers—you never saw anything like it. And it's all because Jane had an idea!

"She thinks there isn't a jam she can't get out of, and darn it, there isn't!"

The screen play shows Jane as a poor little rich girl who decides to reform her family. The family has gone high-hat with their coming into money and Jane doesn't like it.

On account of Jane the family yacht is wrecked and they're all marooned on a supposedly deserted island. Here Jane's "cure" is scheduled to begin, but before anything can be done about it a group of smugglers, who use the island as a secret base, take over. They decide to hold the family for ransom.

Those poor, foolish kidnapers! Jane's a little more than they bargained for. And just when she gets things under control, along comes the coast guard to clinch matters. But Jane accomplishes her purpose. The family is tamed and "Big Sister" finds romance.

Jean Rogers, Arthur Treacher, Robert Kellard, Eddie Collins, Andrew Tombes, Nana Bryant and Joan Woodbury are featured in the cast of "Always In Trouble," which opens today at the Capitol theater.

A homing pigeon, shipped from England to James Wright of Nebraska, started back for England on being released three years later. It was recovered in Boston, Mass.

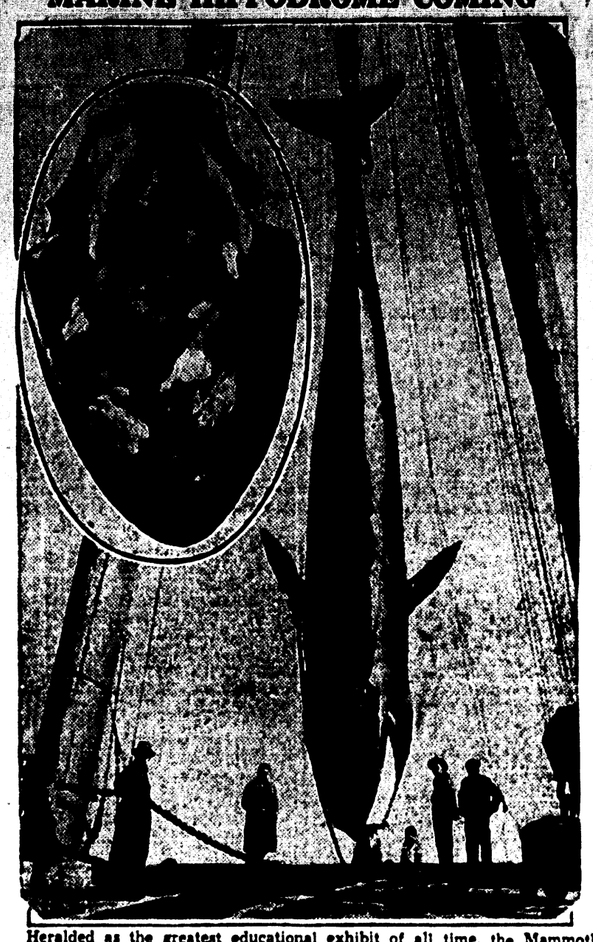
MARINE HIPPODROME COMING



Heralded as the greatest educational exhibit of all time, the Mammoth Marine Hippodrome will appear here for three days, March 17, 18 and 19. "Colossus," a 68-ton sea monster, over 55 feet long, is one of the feature attractions. Accompanying the exhibit are numerous veterans of many years' experience in the whaling business, including Captain David Barnett, who has spent the last 40 years sailing the "seven seas," whose lectures furnish one of the highlights of the exhibit.

Another outstanding attraction with the exhibit is "Sea-Tiny," known the world over as nature's strangest living enigma. Sea-Tiny has become a mecca of interest at the exhibit as she is a puzzle for scientists and a despair for doctors. Other interesting attractions include little penguins from the Byrd's south pole expedition, Freida Pushnik, 17-year-old child marvel, Professor John Lynch and his London Flea circus, John Sales, the original "Pop-eye" the sailor, the headless girl, and 100 other strange oddities.

The exhibit, on a specially constructed railroad train, will be located on a side track near the I. C. depot and will be open to the public from noon until 11 p. m. daily.

Vocational Rehabilitation Yields Valuable Results

Five hundred dollars invested in the education of Herbert Jones of Monroe has saved the federal government $14,400.

Two years ago Mr. Jones, in a train collision in Wichita Falls, Kans., lost both his legs. With a wife and child to support, and no means to provide for them, he applied for relief.

After he had been accepted and listed on the relief rolls, federal workers got busy. His case was referred to E. G. Ludtke, state supervisor of vocational rehabilitation. Mr. Ludtke, also a supervisor for the state department of education, administers federal funds for the training and placement in industry of "any person who, by reason of a physical defect or infirmity, is totally or partially incapacitated for munerative occupation."

The first step in the rehabilitation of Mr. Jones was the replacement of his lost legs by artificial limbs. Federal funds financed half of the purchase; Mr. Jones secured the rest of the cost himself.

With the repair of office machinery as his chosen field, Mr. Jones began training for a useful occupation. After six months work with the Monroe Office Equipment company, he was sent to the office equipment factory in Hartford, Conn., for six more months of training, this latter study being financed by the state and federal governments jointly.

And on his return to Monroe, Mr. Jones found a place with the Office Equipment company waiting for him. According to A. V. Breard, head of the company, "Jones will undoubtedly be one of the fastest men we have in this line of work. He not only has a natural knack for the work, but he is exceptionally ambitious and studies all the time."

Herbert Jones is only one of approximately 1,500 disabled persons who, through the efforts of rehabilitation authorities, have been fitted to support themselves and their families since 1921, when the federal government and the state department of education began such activity. Today over 600 crippled persons are being trained, and each dollar of federal funds expended is matched by a corresponding dollar from the state government.

Training alone is not enough, Mr. Ludtke emphasizes. "We do not consider disabled persons rehabilitated until they are satisfactorily placed in remunerative employment," he says.

Had Mr. Jones remained on the relief rolls, he would have cost the federal government $14,400 by the time he reached the age of 65. His $500 training saved $13,900 of that amount.

PERSONS INTERESTED IN MECHANICS SOUGHT

In view of the improving business outlook and because of increased activity in the field of aviation, there has been an increased interest concerning the availability of skilled mechanics and machinists, stated R. E. Young, manager of the local Louisiana state employment service. His office is desirous of securing names and addresses of men who have had aircraft experience or who are desirous of securing such experience. They can leave their names at the employment office, 230 South Grand street, or if located out of the city can contact representatives from this office at the following places and times:

Columbia, every Monday; Farmerville, every Friday; Harrisonburg, every Wednesday; Jonesboro, every Friday; Lake Providence, every Tuesday; Oak Grove, every Thursday; Rayville, every Wednesday; Ruston, every Tuesday; St. Joseph, every Thursday; Tallulah, every Thursday; Winnsboro, every Tuesday.

The Monroe Camera club is making commendable progress the past several months since it was organized. The month of February was designated as a period when pictures of babies were to be taken. This resulted in a remarkably fine collection and the best of these are now on display at the Monroe Public library.

The snapshots, enlarged many times, show strikingly lifelike pictures of youngsters, comprising a display of which even profession photographers need not be ashamed.

WINNSBORO, La., March 11.—(Special)—"Sonny Boy" Majors, 24, negro, was shot and instantly killed by Marshal R. R. The negro was located in Winnsboro, and when the officer endeavored to place him under arrest he resisted, causing the marshal to be obliged to shoot, it was stated. The bullet grazed Haddset's arm and struck the negro, causing instant death.

Haddset's injured arm was treated at a local clinic.

MARINE HIPPODROME COMING

Heralded as the greatest educational exhibit of all time, the Mammoth Marine Hippodrome will appear here for three days, March 17, 18 and 19. "Colossus," a 68-ton sea monster, over 55 feet long, is one of the feature attractions. Accompanying the exhibit are numerous veterans of many years' experience in the whaling business, including Captain David Barnett, who has spent the last 40 years sailing the "seven seas," whose lectures furnish one of the highlights of the exhibit.

Another outstanding attraction with the exhibit is "Sea-Tiny," known the world over as nature's strangest living enigma. Sea-Tiny has become a mecca of interest at the exhibit as she is a puzzle for scientists and a despair for doctors. Other interesting attractions include little penguins from the Byrd's south pole expedition, Freida Pushnik, 17-year-old child marvel, Professor John Lynch and his London Flea circus, John Sales, the original "Pop-eye" the sailor, the headless girl, and 100 other strange oddities.

The exhibit, on a specially constructed railroad train, will be located on a side track near the I. C. depot and will be open to the public from noon until 11 p. m. daily.

Vocational Rehabilitation Yields Valuable Results

Five hundred dollars invested in the education of Herbert Jones of Monroe has saved the federal government $14,400.

Two years ago Mr. Jones, in a train collision in Wichita Falls, Kans., lost both his legs. With a wife and child to support, and no means to provide for them, he applied for relief.

After he had been accepted and listed on the relief rolls, federal workers got busy. His case was referred to E. G. Ludtke, state supervisor of vocational rehabilitation. Mr. Ludtke, also a supervisor for the state department of education, administers federal funds for the training and placement in industry of "any person who, by reason of a physical defect or infirmity, is totally or partially incapacitated for munerative occupation."

The first step in the rehabilitation of Mr. Jones was the replacement of his lost legs by artificial limbs. Federal funds financed half of the purchase; Mr. Jones secured the rest of the cost himself.

With the repair of office machinery as his chosen field, Mr. Jones began training for a useful occupation. After six months work with the Monroe Office Equipment company, he was sent to the office equipment factory in Hartford, Conn., for six more months of training, this latter study being financed by the state and federal governments jointly.

And on his return to Monroe, Mr. Jones found a place with the Office Equipment company waiting for him. According to A. V. Breard, head of the company, "Jones will undoubtedly be one of the fastest men we have in this line of work. He not only has a natural knack for the work, but he is exceptionally ambitious and studies all the time."

Herbert Jones is only one of approximately 1,500 disabled persons who, through the efforts of rehabilitation authorities, have been fitted to support themselves and their families since 1921, when the federal government and the state department of education began such activity. Today over 600 crippled persons are being trained, and each dollar of federal funds expended is matched by a corresponding dollar from the state government.

Training alone is not enough, Mr. Ludtke emphasizes. "We do not consider disabled persons rehabilitated until they are satisfactorily placed in remunerative employment," he says.

Had Mr. Jones remained on the relief rolls, he would have cost the federal government $14,400 by the time he reached the age of 65. His $500 training saved $13,900 of that amount.

PERSONS INTERESTED IN MECHANICS SOUGHT

In view of the improving business outlook and because of increased activity in the field of aviation, there has been an increased interest concerning the availability of skilled mechanics and machinists, stated R. E. Young, manager of the local Louisiana state employment service. His office is desirous of securing names and addresses of men who have had aircraft experience or who are desirous of securing such experience. They can leave their names at the employment office, 230 South Grand street, or if located out of the city can contact representatives from this office at the following places and times:

Columbia, every Monday; Farmerville, every Friday; Harrisonburg, every Wednesday; Jonesboro, every Friday; Lake Providence, every Tuesday; Oak Grove, every Thursday; Rayville, every Wednesday; Ruston, every Tuesday; St. Joseph, every Thursday; Tallulah, every Thursday; Winnsboro, every Tuesday.

Branch offices, open daily, are located at Bastrop and Ferriday.
